SUZANNE LENGLEN is to be married and every stirpiculturist, convinced that the race can be improved by scientific selection of parents, will be interested in the French champion's children.

The happy husband-to-be is Jacques Brindejones Offenbach, grandson of Offenbach, who composed the music for the "Tales of Hoffmann," including the "O Belle Nuit, O Nuit D'Amour" song.

MLLE. LENGLEN'S young man, inheriting his grandfather's talent, is a poet of ability. Suzanne Lenglen, with her marvelous co-ordination of mind, nerves and muscles, and her ardent temperament, could have wonderful children, with the right father.

On the other hand, the children may not even be able to play tennis. You can't breed humans by any known rule.

THESE ARE exciting Easter days in Jerusalem and the Angel Gabriel keeping track of us all has one of his busiest weeks.

Mohammedans are there praying where Mohammed prayed, Jews returned to Jerusalem to weep over vanished glories at the foot of the great wall, Christians of all kinds, Protestants, Catholics and Greeks, gathered in memory of the crucifixion. In former days Turkish soldiers worked hard to keep Christians of different kinds apart, that they might not slaughter each other.

DEMANDS THAT RAILWAY PAY UP ON ALL BONDS

Charles S. Cummings of Boston today brought a bill in equity in the Suffolk-Superior Court against the Milford and Uxbridge Street Railway Company and the American Trust Company. He asked that the Trust Company be ordered to apply the net income of the Milford and Uxbridge Company to the payment of $165,000 bonds issued by the Milford, Holliston and Framingham Company, absorbed by the formed on May 20, 1902.

Cummings, a bond holder of the absorbed road, claims the Milford and Uxbridge Company is using its earnings for new equipment and payment of interest on its bonds.

MRS. LABAR GIVES LIE TO HUSBAND'S CHARGES IN SHERIFF'S DEFENSE

Augusta, Me., April 3.—Mrs. Grace LaBar, young wife of Eugene S. LaBar, wealthy Augusta lumber merchant, took the stand in defense of Sheriff Henry F. Cummings today and firmly denied her husband's story that the sheriff frequently supplied the LaBar family with liquor.

Her appearance as a witness was the long-awaited "big moment" of the impeachment trial of the sheriff before Governor Brewster and the executive council, and it created a stir in the trial chamber.

Stylishly dressed in the latest Easter mode, she made a striking figure as, pale of countenance, she denied allegation after allegation in a low voice.

It was the marital difficulties of the LaBars, which will come up in the divorce courts soon, that originally gave rise to the investigation of the sheriff's conduct in office, and led indirectly to the demand for his removal.

She was questioned briefly by the defense attorney, Judge Joseph E. F. Connolly, and was then dismissed without cross-examination.

Q.—Your husband made an affidavit in which he said the sheriff often supplied liquor to you and to him. Now, tell us, did Mr. Cummings at any time send or bring liquor, alcohol, wine, whiskey, or anything, to your home? A.—Absolutely, no.

Q.—Did your husband ever telephone to the sheriff, as he says, and ask him to bring some liquor up to

NEW HAVEN ROAD HIT BY I. C. C. FOR WASTE

The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad was censured today by the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington for "unreasonable expenditures" for maintenance of locomotives. The expenses were incurred during 1922, 1923 and 1924, the commission reported.

The New Haven, according to the commission's report, spent too much money for the repair of locomotives in outside shops.

This work could have been done in the road's own shops at a much lower cost, the investigating board found, and the expenditures for outside work were not in the interest of efficient and economical management required by the interstate commerce act.

In a dissenting opinion Commissioner Lewis declared criticism of the New Haven Railroad "amounts to government censure." The bill returned against the carrier he characterized as "vague."

Officials of the road declared today that the increase was due to the shop strike in 1922 and recovery from the strike during the following years, necessitating repair and maintenance work being let under contract to outside shops.

The investigation was based on the total cost of repairs to 177 locomotives at outside shops, which was found to be $3,310,798. This, it was said, compared with the cost of $1,387,634 on most of similar or heavier repairs on the same or heavier classes of locomotives in the road's own shops. The total excess cost on the outside was computed at $1,913,164, but under certain provisions this was reduced to $1,327,345.

FITCHBURG RACKED IN MYSTERIOUS BLAST

Fitchburg, April 2.—An unexplained explosion that rocked houses in the Water street section of the city and shook dishes from their shelves was being investigated by the local authorities today.

Patrolman John R. Riorden, who lives on Lynn street, said the disturbance aroused his family, who feared an earthquake when dishes were sent crashing to the floor.

Patrolman Frank B. Roddy, who covers the route including the Water street section, said the explosion sounded like a big bomb. He said two lines of automobiles had passed through the section some hours previously filled with men he believed to be members of the K. K. K.

FINAL APPEAL FOR NEW TRIAL OF DOOMED THUG REJECTED BY 2 JUDGES

Hartford, Ct., April 3 (I.N.S.)—Gerald Chapman's plea for a new trial was denied by Judges Newell S. Jennings and L. P. Waldo Marvin here this afternoon. Judge Jennings is to meet Governor Trumbull at a special conference here later in the afternoon, according to a statement issued by Judge Frederick J. Groehl, head of Chapman's defense lawyers.

The conference with the governor is expected to be futile inasmuch as he has already declared that he will not grant another reprieve to Chapman.

After hearing Chapman's lawyers for an hour, Judges L. P. Waldo Marvin and Newell S. Jennings took the plea under consideration just before noon, assuring the doomed man's counsel that they would make a speedy reply.

"If I only had two weeks more I would completely upset the State's case," said Judge Frederick J. Groehl after the conference with the Superior Court judges.

Hartford, Ct., April 3.—A woman's good name stands between Gerald Chapman and his escape from the noose, according to F. J. Groehl, chief of counsel for the bandit who is scheduled to hang next Tuesday morning.

If Chapman chooses to sacrifice the good name of this woman he may save his own life, Groehl declared.

The woman has come forward, prepared to sacrifice her reputation and prove an alibi for Chapman, if he asks her to, the attorney stated.

100 ARMED GUARDS HEM HUB IN, KEEP RUM OUT

Deployed in an armed cordon about the extremities of the city and posted on the main arteries of traffic, approximately 100 plainclothes men, sent out by Police Headquarters, were prepared today to meet the annual tide of Easter rum.

A report that big bootleggers planned to rush heavy loads into the city to meet the increased demand caused Captain George W. Patterson, head of the liquor squad, to act promptly.

The routes which police were informed the rum-runners would take are under heavy guard by the army of plainclothes men.

Police are prepared to decisively foil any attempt of the bootleggers to flood the city. While scouts on motorcycles are patrolling roads, others are hidden in ambush along the harbor fronts to prevent any rum from trickling through from that source. Government boats will collaborate with the police in making the coast leak-proof.

WOMAN OFFERS TO SACRIFICE GOOD NAME TO SAVE CHAPMAN

CAN PROVE ALIBI, SHE ASSERTS

A lengthy letter was received by Groehl today from the woman, giving her name and address in Brooklyn. The woman in her letter acknowledges that she was and is in love with Chapman—now indeed, more than ever, for he has shielded her, she says, at the possible cost of his own life.

On the night of October 11, when Chapman was declared to have murdered a New Britain police officer, he was with this woman, Groehl says the letter states.

The writer said that she had known Chapman for some years and met him, when he went to New York on October 11, at the Grand Central Station.

They went to Broadway and he bought her a dress. Then they took the subway to Brooklyn, to an unnamed address. The writer offers to testimy and prove that Chapman was with her until the next day, if he asks her to.

The woman declares she is the mother of several children and the wife of a well-to-do citizen of Brooklyn.

Judges Pledged Prompt Decision for Chapman

Hartford, Ct., April 3 (I.N.S.).—Gerald Chapman's fate rested squarely in the hands of two Superior Court judges here at noon today.

After hearing Chapman's lawyers for an hour, Judges L. P. Waldo Marvin and Newell S. Jennings took the plea under consideration just before noon, assuirng the doomed man's counsel that they would make a speedy reply.

"If I only had two weeks more I would completely upset the State's case," said Judge Frederick J. Groehl after the conference with the Superior Court judges.

Judge Groehl personally bore to the newspaper men waiting in the County Courthouse corridors news of what had transpired in the counsel chamber.

He told how Attorney C. W. Murphy of Danbury had opened the argument for a new trial for Chapman and how Hugh M. Alcorn, State's Attorney, had replied. Judge Groehl completed the hearing.

At the outset the two judges of the State court refused to permit the alibi witnesses to appear before them. Judge Groehl wanted the judges to see the calibre of the men. The judges decided, however, that the situation must depend upon what the Chapman lawyers and the State's Attorney said.

"ALIBI FOUR" PRESENT.

When the conference ended, the two judges announced they would give the case thorouth consideration at once, and would submit their answer in detail, perhaps in written form.

While the confreence was in session the four witnesses who are said to desire to aid Chapman's alibi claim were waiting in the crowded corridor of the courthouse.

GOODWIN VIEW DIFFERS TO BENTON'S

Registrar Frank A. Goodwin today took issue with a ruling made by Attorney-General Jay R. Benton on the authority of a municipality to regulate motor vehicles.

Benton ruled that any city or town may exclude from any of its streets, even the main thoroughfare running to other cities and towns, motor vehicles, and limit the speed if the word "vehicle" is used instead of "motor vehicle" in the regulation.

"So far as the regulation of parking, one way on streets, etc., is concerned," said Goodwin, "it has always been recognized that cities and towns might regulate 'motor vehicles.' But I think there is grave question as to whether the regulation of speed and total exclusion from streets of 'motor vehicles' would be legal without the approval of this department, even if the word 'vehicles' was used."

Under the ruling, Goodwin declared, uniformity in regulating speed throughout the State would be destroyed by indirection.

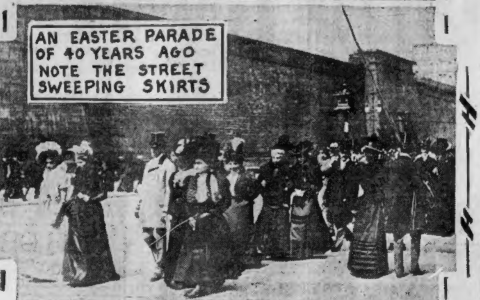
WEATHERMAN PREDICTS FAIR DAY FOR EASTER PARADERS

I FEEL JUST AS SNAPPY AS I LOOK

No longer wearing street sweepers, the girl of today is every bit as anxious to show off her clothes as grandma did a half century ago.



AN EASTER PARADE OF 40 YEARS AGO NOTE THE STREET SWEEPING SKIRTS

The real big parade will march over the streets tomorrow—and oh, what a difference a few years make in what the well-dressed woman and the insignificant party clutching her arm, are wearing. At the left you see the type of ensembles the girls will wear tomorrow; in the centre are the girls parading forty years ago in what they saved out of the Boston fire, and at the right is Beau Brummel himself—all dressed up and wishing he were coming from church rather than going.

Baggy Pants Now Taboo! You Gotta Look Athletic!

Chicago, April 3 (A.P.).—Fashion decrees the athletic looking man for the Spring and Summer of 1926.

The coat worn by the correctly dressed man will be shaped to his back, the shoulders will be broader, the waist more trim, and his trousers will fit more snugly. Oxford bags are taboo, exhibits of the Merchant Tailors and Designers' Association of America show.

The outdoor man will wear a coat with a belt instead of the plain sack with knickers. Knickers are moderately full.

A full flowing coat is proper for motoring, but a Chesterfield model is correct for business and dress occasions.

For Summer a lightweight tuxedo is urged but it is not to displace the full dress coat for formal wear.

MEXICO LIABLE FOR DAMAGES

Washington, April 3 (I.N.S.).—The Mexican government is liable for damages because of injury to American persons and property, the Mexican-American general claims commission decided today. SCOTCH BRIDE FEARS SHE MAY BE DEPORTED

"If you tak' the high road, then I'll tak' the high road, and we'll both be in Scotland together," paraphrased Bridegroom Warren C. Tuttle of No. 74 Avon street, Somerville, today, to pretty Agnes McArthur Sterling Tuttle.

For the long arm of the law may reach out and pluck pretty Mrs. Tuttle from her fireside and send her back to Scotland, but in that case her husband will go with her and himself become an expatriate.

The romance was born in the World War. Granted a leave of absence Tuttle, an overseas veteran of the American forces, went to Paisley, Scotland, and there made the acquaintance of the pretty Scotch lassie.

Later they were married at Tremont Temple by Pastor J. C. Massee.

Now the only cloud in their blue sky of happiness is what action the immigration authorities may take. Under the law the bride may be deported, as she was only visiting in this country.

Here is the fourth of six articles by Gerald Chapman, arch-criminal, who sits within the gray walls of old Wethersfield Prison in Connecticut waiting for death by the hangman's rope next Tuesday. The editor of the Boston Evening American publishes them merely for the general interest they contain and because they give the first insight into Chapman's personal view of his predicament.

FORGRAVE BIDS DRY LEGION WELCOME

While plans were going forward to form a Boston branch of the recently organized Dry Legion of America for the purpose of strict enforcement of the prohibition law, William M. Forgrave, superintendent of the Massachusetts Anti-Saloon League, welcomed the new ally in combatting rum.

"While I do not know anythink about this new organization, recently formed at Portland, Ore., I welcome it, provided it is all right," said Mr. Forgrave. "We now have about 42 national 'wet' organizations, so I guess we can stand one or two more 'dry' ones. The more work done the better."

According to dispatches from Oregon, the new organization is headed by Dr. Clarence True Wilson, secretary of the Methodist board of public morals. Governor Walter M. Pierce of Oregon is honorary president.

Revealing today that she is about to seek an annulment of her marriage to James E. Walters, Boston's notorious "lone wolf," who is serving a life sentence, the girl-wife of the convict pleaded with tears in her eyes for sypathetic treatment by the public.

Although only nineteen years old, Mrs. Irene Walters' experience with marriage has been more trying than that of many an older woman.

"I have been working under my maiden name and trying to forget all the terrible things of my husband's trial, but every now and then I find out that people just won't forget that I was the bride of the 'lone wolf.' If they only would forget, I think I could at last be happy again.

U. S. TO DECLINE COURT BID

Washington, April 3 (A.P.)—A note declining the League of Nations invitation to the World Court conference at Geneva will be forwarded next week by Secretary Kellogg.

HIS FIND ROUTS SCARLET FEVER IN TWO YEARS

Albany, N. Y., April 3 (A.P.)—If the Nobel prize in medicine had been awarded this year it probably would have gone to Dr George Dick of Chicago, who, assisted by his wife, Dr. Gladys H. Dick, discovered the germs of scarlet fever and developed a cure.

At least that was the opinion today of a group of America's most eminent physicians here. Out of the discussion there developed one of the most romantic stories of scientific adventure in the history of medicine, a tale of the courage, sacrifice and determination of a man and a woman overcoming great odds.

As a result of the Dicks' work Dr. William H. Park, director of the Vaccine Laboratory of the City of New York, told the physicians attending a joint meeting of bacteriologists and pathologists that in his city he expected only about 75 deaths from scarlet fever to be recorded this year. The discovery of the Dicks' has virtually conquered the disease in two years.

It was recalled that some twenty five years ago, John D. Rockefeller made a gift of $1,000,000 to found the McCormick Memorial Institute for infectious disease in Chicago for the sole purpose of discovering a cure for scarlet fever. His grand son had been a victim.

'DAMNED SOULS' FIGHT PAY FOR CHAPLAINS

Washington, April 3 (A.P.)—A petition for an injunction to prevent payment of the salaries of chaplains of the Senate and House, and of all clerics attached to the War and Navy Departments was filed in District of Columbia Supreme Court today.

James I. Elliott, member of the recently chartered American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, is the plaintiff, and Frank White, treasurer of the United States, is named defendant.

The petition sets forth that "the employment of chaplains in the Congress of the United States, in the Department of the Navy and the Department of War, constitutes promotion and the establishment of religious and sectarian views and objects in violation of Article One of the Constitution."

"The compensation authorized under appropriation acts of Congress is a diversion of the funds of the United States for a purpose not within the delegated power of Congress to legislate upon," it charges.

The plaintiff prays the court to enjoin the treasurer from paying the salaries of chaplains, and to declare null and void the acts of Congress under which such salaries are authorized. He urges that he, as a tax-payer, and all other citizens of the United States, will "suffer irreparable damage" if the salaries are paid.

The American Association for the Advancement of Atheism was formed in New York with the announced purpose of abolishing belief in God and "contributing to the construction of a better civilization by acting as a wrecking company." It is similar to the "Damned Souls Society."

BYRD IS ALL SET TO START HIS POLAR DASH

New York, April 3 (A.P.)—Lieutenant-Commander Richard E. Byrd was busy today making final arrangements for departure Monday on his Arctic expedition. He hopes to reach the North Pole by air and find unknown land.

The expedition will reach Spitzbergen early in May, Lieutenant Commander Byrd announced, and the first flight will be made about May 15. This will have Peary Land, on the extreme north end of Greenland, for its objective, where 1,000 pounds of gasoline, food and supplies will be deposited as a base for further operations. A second flight will be made back to King's Bay, returning with another load to the Peary Land base.

The popular idea of "Arctic barrenness" was assailed when Vilhjalmur Stefansson and Robert Anderson Pope, Arctic explorers, spoke before the Technology Club in the interest of polar explorations.

Dead Dad's First Letter Tells Boy Remember Ma

Vineland, N. J., April 3.—Out of the grave, the yearning heart of a father will speak each year to his beloved son, as a result of a plan evolved by the late John S. Stevenson, who died three days ago while undergoing an operation.

Anxious to offer a father's counsel and guidance to his five-year-old son John, Jr., Stevenson wrote a series of letters before his death, leaving instructions that one letter should be delivered to the boy on each birthday.

The father, a 36-year-old University of Pennsylvania graduate and veteran of the World War, prepared the letters for the respective ages at which they should be received by the son up to maturity, counselling him in the way he should live.

Stevenson also made provision for Easter and Christmas gifts for "Dickie" as he called his son, the provisions to be carried out by the custodian of the boy.

The first of the letters read:

"Dearest Boy of Mine:

"Your mother is now your daddy as well as your mother. Daddy has been taken away to see Sissy Ann, and some day you will come to see both of us. Daddy is proud of his Dicky Boy, and knows that he will be good to his mother and take care of her always.

"Each year until you are big you will get a letter from your daddy, Dick, on your birthday, and then you will get your last letter when you are married.

"Be good, and God bless my Kathryn and my Dickie, and remember always mother comes first. A big kiss and goodby.

"DADDY DICK."

HUB'S EASTER IS MARKED BY WEDDINGS

THE GLAD PEALING OF wedding bells is Easter week's dominant note—marriage and giving in marriage, the pomp and ceremony of important nuptials furnish the social pattern's warp and woof. The busy shuttle also dots the pattern with a colorful military ball, an equally colorful Chinese lantern festival and exhibits galore.

FOR TODAY WEEK no less than four weddings are on the cards, the Boston viewpoint centering on Miss Emily Schniewind and James Jackson Lee's New York ceremonial, and Miss Margaret Flint and Thomas E. Proctor's Washington bridal.

DINING AND DANCING, in the Hotel Ritz-Carleton's lovely Crystal Room for the bridal party will usher in the Schniewind-Lee nuptials. The ceremonial itself takes place in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, with important members of the Lees of Boston in honor places.

JAMES JACKSON LEE is a son of George C. Lee of Beacon street and Chestnut Hill, and many and of high estate are the family connections. The Sewall H. Fessendens, Mrs. Oliver Ames, Jr., and Mrs. Frederick Wadsworth Busk all are leaves on the family tree.

OTHERS ARE Mrs. Reginald Gray (Rose Lee), and her son, Reginald Gray; and the "Jimmie" Jackson family, which includes the much-liked Mr. and Mrs. Jackson and their lively young family.

STATELY MRS. JAMES JACKSON, the senior, she of the snow white tresses and patrician distinction, is a relative of this highly connected young man; also the Robert Haydock Hallowells.

BOSTON YOUNG men in the bridal entourage are George C. Lee, Jr., Nelson Lee, Chandler and Edward Bigelow, Vinton Chapin, Henry Sturgis Grew, Jr., Arthur Hobson, Harrison Gardner, Charles Buel, Thomas Oakes and Frank Akers.

THESE AND OTHERS, designed to adorn the wedding picture in formal afternoon array, were all merrily entertained on March 27 by the bridegroom-elect on the occasion of his bachelor dinner, a carefree hospitality down at the Myopia Hunt Club.

AFTER THE WEDDING the youthful Lees depart overseas, to establish their home in London for a period of two years, while Mr. Lee pursues his career, that of banking.

EXQUISITE BETHLEHEM Chapel of the National Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul, Washington, for the bridal troth and the Sheridan Circle residence of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Flint (parents of the bride) for the reception lend special beauty to the Flint-Proctor bridal picture.

THE LARGE AND imposing Proctor connection hereabouts and the bridegroom's New York affiliations (his late mother was Mattina Ricker of the Gotham family), what with the distinguished Flint assemblage, will make a brilliant wedding company.

MISS GRACE VANDERBILT is a bridesmaid, also Miss Polly Proctor, a sister of the bridegroom. His father is James Howe Proctor, of Commonwealth avenue and "Mostly Hall," Ipswich, and Miss Esther Proctor, of the past Winter's buds, is a sister.

ALSO ON SATURDAY next in the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, Miss Dorothy Turner Meserve, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hill Meserve of Gotham, becomes Mrs. Philip Bradish Kunhardt, daughter-in-law of the George E. Kunhardts of North Andover, Mass.

LOCAL REPRESENTATION—as in the Schniewind-Lee wedding—centres mainly in the masculine corps, with Bernard S. Cogan, George Owen, Jr., Everett Morss, Jr., and Justin Dempsey for ushers and George E. Kunhardt for best man.

BOSTON'S VERY own wedding is of first degree importance. It will be celebrated in the First Parish Church, Brookline, and unites Miss Helen Sargent, daughter of Sullivan A. Sargent and the late Mrs. Sargent (born Fessenden) to Walter K. Shaw, Jr., Harvard graduate and keen yachtsman.

MISS GRACE SARGENT, dark-eyed beauty of the younger set, will be the honor maid and sole feminine attendant. Marked simplicity surrounds bridal arrangements, due to a bereavement in the bridegroom's family.

LANTERN FESTIVAL-WISE, next Friday comes that affair sacred to Infant's Hospital welfare, the annual Spring cabaret and dance under direction of the smartest. It's always something to feast the eye, this venture, and with the Chinese motif brilliancy is the watchword.

ALL SOCIETY as audience, Harvard students and belles for various duties, a program of specialties and a dance contest are attractions. Mrs. F. Wadsworth Busk is at the helm, and aiding her are Mrs. Arthur Beale, Chief of Decorators; Mrs. Louis Curtis, Jr., and a score of others.

MAJOR WALTER MERRIAM PRATT'S is the master hand at decoration-planning for the ball on Tuesday given by that smart Service host, the Military Order of the World War, when Mesdames Philip S. Andrews and Preston Brown are slated for appearance (really almost their first) as honored guests.

WHILE OTHERS talk the practical Japanese go straight ahead. Recently they completed a gigantic, long-distance bombing airplane, so big it took seven railroad cars to carry it.

Yesterday Japan added to her powerful fleet a huge submarine of 2,000 tons, with all the latest devices, including heavy guns, a war submarine able to cross any ocean, able to carry and release flying machines.

While the United States solemnly discusses beer and the right of citizens to select their own beverages, Japan attends to things more important.

SAN DIEGO reports that a Japanese offer to colonize and develop 2,000,000 acres in Mexico has been rejected. Public sentiment in Mexico, as in Canada, the United States, and all North and South America, would oppose Asiatic colonization and domination.

This means no lack of respect for the Japanese, competent, intelligent, determined and industrious. It means, rather, a frank confession that our average inhabitant could not successfully compete with the average Japanese.

CARL RUSSO, sophomore at Rochester University, thinks he is an atheist, and is vice-president of a childish college society called "The Damned Soul." He is suing C. N. Howard, chairman of the United States Prohibition Enforcement Committee, for $10,000, saying Howard libeled him.

How could you libel a self-confessed "damned soul?" How can a man who calls himself an atheist believe that he has ANY kind of soul, damned or saved?

No God, no soul, surely.

VISITING BISHOP AT CATHEDRAL SERVICES

B yJAMES WALSH.

His Beatitude Aloysius Barlassina, titular bishop of Capharnum and Patriarch of Jerusalem, was present at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross today when Cardinal O'Connell presided at a solemn mass following the blessing of the new fire, the Paschal candle and the Easter holy water

The Patriarch, who is on a brief visit to this country, came from New York on a flying visit to pay his respects to the dean of the American heirarchy. He received holy communion in the private chapel in the rectory of the Cathedral.

BEATITUDE ALOYSIUS BARLASSINA

Following the Cathedral services, His Beatitude accompanied the Cardinal to the diocesan house in Granby street, Back Bay. He will return to New York today.

The visit of the Patriarch recalls the spiritual pilgrimage made by the Cardinal to the Holy Land at the beginning of 1924. It was the first time an American Cardinal had visited the Holy Land and, for the first time, the American flag was seen flying from the tower of the patriarchate in Jerusalem.

This was in honor of the visit of the Cardinal. At that time the Patriarch conferred, by authority of His Holiness Pope Pius XI, the Great Cross of the Holy Sepulche. In conferring this honor on Cardinal O'Connell, he said:

"This is the first time that the American flag has been seen flying on the tower of the patriarchate, but it is also the first time that an American Cardinal has paid a visit to the Holy Land. In order to express my feelings of regard and esteem for your eminence, as well as a token of good will toward the Catholics of America, I confer upon you the decoration of the Great Cross of the Holy Sepulchre."

SPECIAL MUSIC FOR PASSOVER

Sermons appealing especially to Jewish youth will be delivered today, and Monday and Tuesday in the Crawford street Synagogue, Roxbury, by Rabbi Ezekiel Leavitt, who has been conducting Passover services for Congregation Beth Hamidrash Hagadol.

In honor of Passover the Temple Israel choir will render special selections at the service Sunday morning. "El Kelohenu" will be one of them. "To Believe or Not to Believe" will be the subject of Dr. Harry Levi's address on that day.

The Young People's Society of Temple Israel will repeat their recent successful circus at the Convalescent Home of the Children's Hospital, Wellesley, Saturday afternoon, April 17 and also at the Peabody Home for Crippled Children, two days later. Arnold Rosenberg is in charge.

The next regular meeting of the Temple Israel Sisterhood will be held in the vestry Tuesday afternoon, April 6, Rabbi Harry Levi's lecture is scheduled for half-past two. At this meeting there will be a sale of aprons, left from the recent fair.

MOTHER'S APPEAL IN AMERICAN FREES BOY

A mother was happy today as a result of an act which demonstrated that the milk of human kindness is still flowing. Her son has been given another chance and a job. The boy, confined in a Western jail for joyriding in a "borrowed" automobile, is to be released next week to take the promised job. It all came about as the result of the publication by the Boston Evening American of the mother's appeal for another chance for her boy.

"The world is still populated with good folks," she said today. "I know my boy is a good boy and I am sure he is going to make good."

What Do You Know About This?

"It's all right for John Golden to talk about going back to the two-dollar drama," remarked a ticket buyer at the Hollis the other night, "but I'd like to know when he is going to get us back to that good old schooner of beer for five cents."

FAVORITES OF THE STAGE SHOW CLASS AND ACTION IN WEEK'S NEW BILLS

THE BAD MAN'S BACK. Yes sir, it's Holbrook Blinn, he of the most polished and engaging roguery, with Judith Anderson, his lovely leading lady. And here is a scene from his new play, strangely called "The Dove," which flutters to its perch at the Tremont Monday night.

A LIGHT HEARTED HERO is Max Hoffman, Jr., who basks in the smile of Marion Sunshine, one of the shining lights in "Captain Jinks" at the Shubert.

THE CROWNING ACHIEVEMENT in "Aloma of the South Seas, at the Wilbur, occurs when the hero (Harry C. Bannister) crowns the captain (Walter Ayers) with a bottle (scotch) and breaks it gently (well, hardly) to him that he ain't done right by our Nell.

PLAYING STRAIGHT GETS THE MONEY

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

MAKE no mistake about it—ample reward always awaits the faithful. Good work, honestly and efficiently done, seldom remains long in obscurity. A great editor, addressing the men in his own organization, once said that a "good man was a man who did good work," and what may be applied to newspaper men may also, in all propriety, bear suitably upon Frank Hookailo, the smallest manager of a theatre in Greater Boston. Put him on the scales and there is no groaning or straining in the mechanism. Still he was awarded the first prize, a negotiable check for $250, for showing the highest percentage of increase in business over a given period in the entire group of 120 theatres known familiarly as the Bill Gray circuit.

* * *

SO, Hookailo, who sits at the helm and steers the course of the Olympia Theatre on Washington street, must be a good man. His problems this year have been unusual and trying. New and magnificent rival picture houses have been opened in his neighborhood. He has been shut in between two palaces of exceptional beauty and extraordinary drawing power. No other manager in the long list of competing executives in his circuit has been pressed with so much determined opposition. Hookailo's job was to meet the hardest competition ever crowded upon a theatre manager. On prospects alone his chance of figuring in the circuit prize money was about as favorable as that of the proverbial snow-ball in the nether regions. As the wisest men of the films gauged it, Hookailo was perfectly set for a long period of tears and agony. If he finished anywhere after the first hundred entrees he could slap himself on the back for doing a good job.

* * *

BUT the tiny manager aimed higher—and better. He pulled in a boy's size belt and rolled up a juvenile sleeve. There was no trumpeting about any part of it—just attention to his theatre and to the things he believed would build business. It is now more than evident that Hookailo was right, that he was a good man doing a good job, for the Olympia led all the rest in the final tabulation. "It was really very simple," he was saying in explanation. "You see, we have a very straightforward policy at the Olympia. When we make customers we hold them. First, we give our patrons the best pictures money can buy, but that in itself isn't enough. Other theatres, too, have good pictures. But we always play fair with those who like to visit our theatre. Our prices are always the same, whether it is a holiday, a Sunday or just an ordinary Monday when business naturally sags. We are a one-price house; we do not boost prices on busy days for a little easy money. That is my explanation. The public takes quick note of a square deal just as surely it resents a bad one. What am I going to do with my prize money? It is going to be put away to help little Frank's expenses at Harvard about eighteen years from now."

FRANK HOOKAILO, diminutive only in stature, does big things for the Olympia by making it the winner in the "Bill" Gray circuit of houses.

NEXT WEEK'S NEW BILLS

TREMONT—"The Dove," a melodrama by Willard Mack, with Holbrook Blinn and Judith Anderson as its principal actors. Contains all the interesting people the playgoer loves to see in action—hero, villain and heroine. Comes here backed by extraordinary engagements in New York and Chicago. In the supporting cast are Frank Thomas and William Norris. Produced by David Belasco.

* * *

COPLEY—"The Young Person in Pink," a three-act comedy of English life by Gertrude Jennings. First time in America. Said to be a frolicsome piece of wholesome humor and a full measure of sentiment. In the cast are E. E. Clive, Alan Mowbray, Katherine Standing, May Edies, Elizabeth Ryce, Elspeth Dudgeon, Madeline Grande, Jessamine Newcombe, Mona Glynne, Eunice Blake and Halga Lundin. Ray Collins Rolls His Own Formula for Optimism

Ray Collins, who plays "Nuitane," in "Aloma of the South Seas" at the Wilbur, is one of those happy individuals who believe everything happens for the best and never allows his mind to dwell on prospective unpleasantness. In fact, Ray is a confirmed optimist, as evidenced by his response to the toastmaster's call at a luncheon given by the Optimist Club of Philadelphia while "Aloma" was playing there. Ray's definition of an optimist: "The American is a good illustration of an optimist, because he is always ready to take a chance even though the odds are stacked high against him. Fully ninety per cent. of us are optimists by necessity for we realize that success cannot be achieved any other way. The other ten percent. are called pessimists.

Harvard Glee Club's Final Concert for Season

At its final concert of the season at Symphony Hall, Thursday evening, April 15, the Harvard Glee Club will have as assisting artist Frieda Hempel, the "modern Jenny Lind," who will sing a group of German songs, the Shadow Song from Meyerbeer's "Dinorah," and four folk-songs of as many nationalities. The Glee Club, which this year is being ably led by G. Wallace Woodworth in the absence of the regular conductor, Dr. Archibald T. Davison, will offer several choruses of especial interest. Among these are three hymns from the Rig-Veda, by Holst, the contemporary English composer, a chorus from "Les Deux Avares" by Gretry, and "Mother Moscow" by Tschaspokoy.

BIG JOB FOR DIRECTOR IN 'BEN-HUR'

Some idea of the difficulties that confronted the producers of "Ben-Hur," at the Colonial, may be gleaned from a consideration of a few of the technical problems that faced the director. Strangely enough, the motion picture is required to be more accurate than text or drama. In scene and detail the camera is a hard instrument that demands absolute truth.

So, while General Lew Wallace could give but a vague and general description of the great circus at Antioch, Fred Niblo and his art directors were obliged to reproduce the actual circus from no better guides than broken shafts and ruins of the Master Circus in Rome. And they had to bear in mind that the architecture of Antioch was partly Hellenized and Orientalized, modifying the Roman motifs both in structure and in decoration. This is but one instance.

The same requirements of profound research characterized preparations for the making of the Joppa Gate, the market place and streets of the Jerusalem of the Christian era; the building of the triremes for the sea battles; the scenes at Misenum and on the Aegean; the palace of Hur, and the Cave of David at Bethlehem.

Hulda Iashanske, possessor of one of the finest voices on the concert stage, will sing at Symphony Hall next Thursday evening. Her program includes the ever-popular "Depuis le jour" from "Louise," an aria from Tschaikovsky's "Pique Dame," "Ombra Mai fu" from Handel's "Xerxes" (better known as the famous Handel's "Largo"), and a varied collection of songs.

VIN ROUGE CATCHES SLIM'S KEEN EYE

THE POP of the bottle is sweet music to Karl Dane's ears in "The Big Parade" at the Majestic. Carl is just slim in the picture, but really he has a very fat part of it.

THE PRODUCER'S VIEWPOINT

By DAVID BELASCO.

Producer of "The Dove" at the Tremont.

I like new productions; I like to make them. Now, for instance, this piece has given me more pleasure in the making than the possession of a fleet of yachts. Seeing it transpire on the stage for the first time gives such a thrill as cannot be described: and more it provides an energy that acts as a spur to keep on achieving new things in the theatre. The public demands much of one who has been successful.

David Belasco

The present trend to the play of character was bound to come. You'll recall the dominating personalities of some of the greatest novels. It is through Becky Sharp that we most often remember 'Vanity Fair.' It is on account of Jean Valjean that we think of 'Les Miserables.' Nobody, in books or plays, is so interesting as the natural human being.

Productions, like the houses we live in, are only backgrounds. A poor play in a great setting comes off in a week. The comprehending of personalities should create surroundings. The stage may be likened to an oasis, a green oasis in the desert of life. It is planted there, and it was in the beginning to make us smile—to make us think, cry, to thrill or to soothe.

We stage people are the ministers of pleasure and recreation and, without pleasure and recreation, men cannot be happy. There you have the great mission of the theatre. The chief mission of my life's experience in the theatre is I think, the imperative need of harmony among all workers of the stage.

Ted Gibson Tells of His Vaudeville Tryout

Ted Gibson, who plays "Abie" in "Abie's Irish Rose" at the Castle Square, tells the following story of how he made his first effort in the profession: "It was in vaudeville with my sister," says Mr. Gibson. "In those days it was customary for 'new talent' to have their tryout in the morning at the Union Square Theatre, New York city, the only audience present being the booking agent and one or two managers. We happened to be one of the fortunate teams that pleased the blase critics, and received a contract for sixty dollars a week joint, out of which came our living expenses and the agent's commission. True, at times the sledding was hard and many times the wires were tapped home for a sufficient sum to get us out of towns, but bearing in mind the adage that perseverance conquers, we stuck it out

OPERETTA OR DRAMA, SAME TO ALFRED

From leading tenor in musical comedy and Viennese operettas to the role of "Citizen Gobin," in the sturdy streetwasher in "Seventh Heaven," has been an easy step for Alfred Kappeler, former Swarthmore football hero, now appearing in this John Golden play at the Hollis. Kappeler's acting ability, plus his splendid singing voice has stamped him as one of the most versatile of American character artists and his services are always in demand.

Alfred Kappeler

Following his graduation from Swarthmore in 1897, Kappeler appeared in a Viennese operetta, "The Love Waltz," under the management of Jesse L. Laskey. Later he produced and starred in a similar piece, "In a Grecian Garden." In "The Arcadians" and "Adele" he was leading tenor and he celebrated his return to light opera last season by singing in "China Rose."

FLUFF AND FEATHERS, GRINS AND GUFFAWS IN THE WEEK'S NEW CINEMA

A GOOD TIME is had by all in this scene from Harold Lloyd's latest, "For Heaven's Sake," at the Metropolitan. Harold and Jobyna Ralston enjoy their infatuation, Paul Wiegel relishes his appropriation, audiences laugh over the situation.

POINTING OUT a difficulty in "The Bat," the spooky mystery drama, at the State. Robert McKim warns Betty Jewel and tells her "the bad Bat'll get you if you don't watch out!"

PARK BENCH BOOBS at large with the first call for Spring saps in this silly scene from "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp" at the Olympia. Harry Langdon and Joan Crawford are the interpreters of this fantasy.

NO JAUNTING CAR for Dolores Costello, the fair colleen in "The Little Irish Girl" at the Fenway. Mathew Betz, the jaunty villain, objects.

CAR SICK and weary of trying to make the "Schenckmann Six" show signs of life. It's Alexander Carr and George Sidney as Potash and Perlmutter in "Partners Again" at the Orpheum.

Charleston Instruction Via the Silversheet

Ambitious students of the Charleston or, in fact, anyone interested in generating its gyrations, may find the dance's intricacies quite simple as shown in Arthur Murray's two-reel instruction picture, to be seen for the week at the Washington Street Olympia. As an aid to the timid and not-so-timid, Mr. Murray's skill is unquestioned; in fact, he numbers among his pupils the Prince of Wales, for whom he was engaged by Clarence Mackay, host to the royal visitor on the occasion of his last trip, to teach him the various steps of this dance. And now, it is said, that the Prince is prouder of his sixty-four Charleston twists than of his many titles.

CELEBRATION TO BE BIG FOR N. V. A.

The first gun fired in the local celebration —of National Vaudeville Week—more popularly termed N. V. A. Week—will boom on Boston Common, Monday noon. With the combined interest and energy of every available vaudevillian and the hearty co-operation of all the variety and picture houses, it is planned to make the week's festivities long memorable in theatrical history.

Monday's event on the Common gets started at the Parkman Bandstand with a musical program, clowns, acrobats and "troupers" of all kinds. A different entertainment will appear each day during the noon hour, up to and including Thursday—Benefit Day—the high spot of the week's rejoicing, when an "extra special" ceremonial will eventuate.

Benefit Day in the theatres will be observed by gala midnight performances in both the New Boston and the Metropolitan Theatres; the funds derived from these shows—as in like performances throughout the country—will be devoted to the relief fund of N. V. A. The show starts at 11:30 p. m. at both houses. As far as possible, the same attractions will appear at each, as it is planned to move each act to the other theatre on completion of its turn. There are more than 40 acts, 25 jazz bands and relays of radio announcers to explain things as they come along.

Manager Victor J. Morris Seeks Amateur Talent

Interest in the Loew's Orpheum Frolic, which is announced for the week of May 19 at the Orpheum Theatre,, is becoming quite keen among the youthful amateurs of Greater Boston. Already applications are beginning to pour in at the box office and everytning points to a more successful production than that of a few years ago. The Frolic is open to all amateurs and any boy or girl who possesses any ability to sing or dance, or who can play some instrument, is urged to file application without delay. The production will in every way be of professional caliber except in the personnel of the players and, as was the case on the other occasions, it will be directed by Victor Hyde, noted as a Broadway producer.

Making her Boston debut, Cecile Leweaux, contralto, will give a recital at Jordan Hall on Tuesday evening. In the list of songs that she will present, there is an unusual group by French composers, and another group by Americans.

CHANGES IN VAUDEVILLE

B. F. KEITH'S—Ras Samuels, singing comedienne and more familiarly known as the "Blue Streak of Vaudeville," ushers in N. V. A. Week at this house; the Keith-Albee Unit Show Number One, a revue production with special scenery, stars and features; Warren and O'Brien in "What Price Revue"; Peter Higgins, young Irish tenor; Earnest Hyatt in "Nothing Serious," and others.

ORPHEUM—Margo & Beth and company in a dance fantasy with "Arline"; Raymond and Royce in "Southern Humor"; "The Wedding Ring," a "sur-prize fight" in three rounds; Rose and Edwards in "The Two Bull-Garlans"; Shepherd and King in "Radiograms"; Katherine Sinclair and Company in an athletic pot pouri, and others.

Avery Hopwood Explains a Trick of the Trade

In support of his contention that the imaginative power of an audience is the greatest force the playwright may command, Avery Hopwood, co-author of "The Bat," mystery thriller coming in film form to the State, says: "We will take, for illustration, the scene in 'The Bat' where a bloody hand is thrust through a window. That bit of action is always good for a startled gasp. Why? Simply because every member of the audience on seeing that hand conceives a different reason for its being there and what is back of it. If two men hear an unseen woman scream, each will assign a different reason for that scream. They may both find on investigation that the lady has merely sprained her ankle, but there are a thousand other things that might have happened, and each man will be emotionalized according to his own interpretation of the scream."

My Dear Sirs:
Please allow me to say that I enjoyed ''The Big Parade'' immensely. I wish every man and woman in the Commonwealth could see it. They would find it more interesting than any movie they have ever witnessed; especially interesting and romantic because of the love story that is part and parcel of it.
It is a marvellous picture and, as far as I could observe, it held every one's attention every minute of the performance. Repeatedly it seemed to me that the high order and intense action of the piece could hardly continue to be maintained. However it was to the very end. It is the finest picture I ever saw.
Very truly yours,

STAGE AND SCREEN

Birthday Greetings, Mr. Lederer.

Uncle George Lederer, who writes pieces for the papers for "Ben Hur," turned another corner in life's journey this week. It was his umpty-second and the fact was promptly recognized by Tom Kane of "Seventh Heaven," who purchased a large and first class dinner.

Boston Hats on Fifth Avenue.

The more or less famous Easter parade on Fifth avenue tomorrow will have in its mixed procession Ada-May, Marion Sunshine and Nina Olivette of the "Captain Jinks" company at the Shubert. Ada-May announces that the trio will do its strutting under Boston made hats.

Allan Forrest Related to Two Noted Filmsters

Allan Forrest, who appears in "Partners Again" at Loew's Orpheum, is, in real life, the husband of Lottie Pickford, and of course, brother-in-law of the famous Mary and 'Doug.' He was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., and was educated in Cleveland, Ohio. He has had a long and continuously successful motion picture career, appearing in prominent roles with notable successes as "Fifth Avenue," Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," "Long Live the King," "The Dressmaker from Paris" and "The Prince of Pilsen," in which he played the title role. He is very fond of athletics, being partial to horseback riding and polo. He is a member of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, the Hollywood Athletic Club and the Writers Club.

Conservatory Pupils to Give "Madame Butterfly"

Present and former students of the New England Conservatory of Music will appear in a production of Puccini's "Madame Butterfly" at the Boston Opera House, Saturday afternoon, April 24. Wallace Goodrich, formerly associate conductor of the old Boston Opera Company and now dean of the Conservatory, will be the conductor. The performance will be for the benefit of the scholarship fund of the Conservatory. Of the principal roles, Madame Butterfly will be interpreted by Miss Dorothy Frances, Suzuki by Mrs. Jeska Swartz Morse, Pinkerton by Rulon Y. Robison, Sharpless by David Blair McClosky, and Goro by Richard McIntire. The orchestra will be made up of players from the Conservatory Orchestra, and the chorus, too, will consist of Conservatory students.

LLOYD LITTLE KNOWN SANS SPECS.

If your favorite movie stars were to come walking down the street would you recognize them? Don't say "Yes"—right away. Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford have discovered that being well known is a darned nuisance. Every time they venture out a well-meaning mob tears them to pieces in an effort to collect souvenirs. The same is true of Gloria Swanson.

But, on the other hand, many of the screen's stellar players can walk down the boulevards of Hollywood itself and not be recognized by a single soul! The one star in particular who can pass unnoticed is Harold Lloyd. Here's a fact to memorize—Harold Lloyd does not wear glasses when he's off the screen. And ninety-nine out of a hundred persons find it mighty hard to recognize the quiet mannered chap who accosts them with a cheery 'hello' as the same boisterous comedian who has made such a name for himself in the field of wholesome mass-comedy.

While working on "For Heaven's Sake," the new picture at the Metropolitan, Harold was in and around Hollywood for almost eight months. Yet in that time he was recognized by not more than 30 people!

The Boston Symphony Orchestra under Serge Koussevitzky, will be heard in the final concert of the new Tuesday afternoon historical series next Tuesday at 3:15 in Symphony Hall. The program will be as follows: Ravel's "Mother Goose" Pieces; Stravinsky's Orchestra Suite from the Ballet, "Petrouchka" Honegger's "Pacific 231"; and Respighi's Symphonic Poem, "Pines of Rome."

Next of Repertory Revels Are Held Monday Night

The second of the Repertory Theatre's gay midnight dance frolics will be held in Repertory Hall (in the theatre building) on Monday night after the performance. This occasion is chronicled as "The Florida Everglades" and the entertainment part of the program will be broadcast over WBZ, with Sam Wren acting as master of ceremonies. Interspersed with the general dancing, a variety of diverting features are promised. Of these, a fashion show musical acts and a Charleston exhibition. If convenient, it is urged that the ladies wear Spanish shawls, and that everyone bring plenty of "ammunition" for "The Battle of Flowers," at the grand finale.

CHAPMAN SAYS CARDS STACKED AGAINST HIM

Contends That Material Witness for the Defense Failed to Appear

you consider that he gave such an accurate description of Stuyvesant that the New York detectives "picked up" Stuyvesant on that description some time after the murder. Further still, when he went to New York he picked Stuyvesant out of a crowded courtroom. But why bother about Stuyvesant when there was a "super-bandit" with a countrywide reputation.

To hell with Stuyvesant, let's get Chapman and swing him, we have done something. Stuyvesant is small game; Chapman is a national figure, and the man who sends him to the gallows will have earned a national reputation! Can any fair-minded person question Johnson's identification of Stuyvesant?

The witnesses who swore away my life, the witnesses who declared that they saw me dash out of the store with a smoking gun in my hand, saw the man whom they thought was me for an instant while JOHNSON SAW HIM FOUR TIMES! Johnson saw him and Shean breaking into the store, saw them come out of the store several times, and Johnson was the man that notified the police.

BROOKLYN ALIBI

I was in Brooklyn on the night of the murder. Four or five people saw me in Brooklyn, among whom was a policeman by the name of McCormick. McCormick knows he saw me in Chastain's store around 8.30 in the evening of the night before the murder.

Further still, he has admitted that he saw me, admitted it to men of absolutely unimpeachable character, men who never saw me before and men to whom I have never spoken.

Why didn't Police Commissioner Enright let McCormick go to Hartford to tell what he knew to be the truth. A police officer giving testimony which would save the life of Gerald Chapman!

Away with such an idea! Let Chapman hang! The world is better off without Chapman.

By God, what a spectacle! I toss a kiss to my accuser and all those people who have participated in my prosecution, and I say to them: "I leave you with your conscience after I have gone to eternity!" Wait until you have learned that Gerald Chapman didn't kill Officer Skelly. It will all come out some day. Such things always come out.

WITNESSES FEAR

After I had been condemned to death, several witnesses went to my attorneys to tell them things which might have saved my life if they had been told to the jury.

One of these witnesses said he was in New Britain on the morning of the murder. His name is John Callahan, and he resides in Westbury, L. I. He is a chauffeur, in the employ of the president of the Jamaica water works.

He told my attorney that he saw the man who came running out of the store where Jim Skelly was killed. He said I was not that man.

He volunteered to testify for me when attorneys wanted him. Now he's afraid to come forth and tell what he knows.

Further still, there's that fellow Gregory whom I met and talked with on the train from Springfield to New York City. He, too, got in touch with my attorneys after I had been convicted. He said he recalled meeting me on that train. He made an affidavit to that effect, and then he came up here to Wethersfield (without my knowledge) and identified me as the man whom he met and with whom he talked on the Springfield and New York train the day before the murder.

WON'T INFORM

Are these men afraid of the police? Why do these fellows refuse to help me now? What has happened to them? Not over ten days ago Gregory wired my lawyers that he was ready to testify; then he suddenly disappeared!

Within ten days John Callahan has changed his mind about testifying. I know why he has changed his mind, and, notwithstanding the fact that his testimony would help me, I cannot tell the public why he has weakened at the psychological moment.

I'm too much of a gentleman to hurt anybody. I would rather die than turn informer. There's none of the black blood of the rat trickling through my veins! In the words of the immortal Bard of Avon, "I dare do all that becomes a man; who dare do more is none."

It took a bit of vigorous explanation that he was a Sunday school teacher to get him free.

STATE POLICE OUST STRIKERS

Holbrook, April 3.—State police today dispersed a crowd of strikers and workers who gathered at the plant of the Brockton Shoe Manufacturing Company, following a strike and subsequent lock-out.

Police Chief Crooker, unable to move the crowd, enlisted the aid of State police. The crowd, however, was not hostile.

Sixty employes in the mating room went on strike yesterday, when demands for a wage increase were ignored. President Eugene F. O'Neill of the shoe company immediately closed the plant, throwing 500 persons out of work. Many of the strikers were ready to return to work today, it was said, but they found the plant closed down.

Strikers received a setback when John Hickey, president of the Holbrook Shoe Workers' Union, tendered his resignation, because, he said, he had not been consulted by union officials who ordered the strike.

MRS. LABAR GIVES 'LIE' TO HUSBAND

Society Leader, in Clear Voice, Defends Sheriff at Stirring Maine Trial

your house? A.—Emphatically, he did not.

Q.—Did Sheriff Cummings ever telephone that he had some liquor and then did your husband go down to get it? A.—No.

After a few more denials, she left the witness stand.

Reuben Shaw of West Gardiner, who acted as special guard over Kirby, the murderer, said that over a period of 91 nights he saw but one man drunk in the jail. That was a trusty, who was used as a spotter by the police. The trusty arrived at the jail door drunk one night, said Shaw, and was thrown in the "dog hole" till he sobered up.

Colonel Keith Ryan, in charge of the National Soldiers' Home in Maine, testified that the county authorities always co-operated heartily with him in preventing the sale of liquors.

"FRAME UP" CHARGED.

An alleged attempt of Federal prohibition enforcement authorities to "frame up" Sheriff Cummings was described by defence counsel in an effort to show why he should have the privilege of questioning United States agents, but after long argument he was ordered to withdraw his questions. He will be given a chance to get the same evidence from Federal records.

Judge Connolly charged that the United States officers tried to make it appear that a bootlegger, while in the Kennebec County Jail, carried on his illegal liquor traffic, and that in shaping the alleged frame-up they used a Salem, Mass., woman as a spy.

Connolly seized the opportunity of outlining the alleged plot against the accused sheriff when Prohibition Director Seth May, chief Federal dry agent in Maine objected to his questioning of Prohibition Agent William R. Corbett of Augusta.

"I am endeavoring to prove here that James Letz of Lynn, Mass., and Catherine McDermott of Salem went into the county jail where Calix Bluoin was a prisoner and called on Bluoin, having a long talk with him," said Connolly.

"Following this conversation Federal agents raided Thomas Quiriom's barn and seized 148 gallons of alcohol.

"I claim that those two were sent to the jail by Federal agents for the express purpose of compromising Sheriff Cummings by making it appear that a prisoner was conducting his liquor business even while in jail."

Sheriff Cummings was also prepared to take the stand, to admit the truth of many of the charges against him but to explain them by adding details that did not appear in the testimony of government witnesses. Cummings is charged with general laxity in his conduct of the prison, allowing prisoners to gamble and drink there, and with distributing liquor among his friends.

COLLEGE BOXERS SEEK FAME IN AMATEUR TITLE BOUTS

TRIP LURE FOR MANY ATHLETES

Journey to South America Attracts Many Entrants to Boston Champ Tourney

By RINGSIDE.

There was a time when college students could tour foreign countries requiring a very small amount of money. They would enroll as seamen, firemen or stewards aboard vessels and in that way work their passage both ways.

However, a new wrinkle has come up now, with three college men from New England entered in the national amateur boxing championships at the Arena on Monday and Tuesday. They hope to win titles in their respective classes and be three of the favored men to visit Buenos Aires two weeks from now as American representatives in the boxing tournament between United States and the Argentine, with all their expenses paid.

The men are Bernard Bardi of Dartmouth College, holder of the national championship in the 147-pound class; Philip Coykendale, also of Dartmouth College, college middleweight champion, and Allan Lindblad, champion heavyweight boxer of Harvard College. All three have an enviable record in their brief career in the ring, and all are confident of fighting their way through to the finals.

BARDI NOW ELIGIBLE.

At first it was feared Bardi would be unable to defend his title as he did not want to be behind in his studies. However, Bardi has caught up with his books in fine style and has been training faithfully under the watchful eyes of Eddie Shevlin, Dartmouth's boxing instructor, at Hanover. Shevlin is authority for the statement that both Bardi and Coykendale, two of his most earnest pupils, will be on the ship bound for South American waters when the American team sails for Argentina.

Lindblad, who is 22 years of age, was national junior 175-pound champion in 1925, having won the title in the championship contests in Baltimore. He recently won the Harvard championship in the heavyweight class by knocking out Eddie Bradford, Harvard's husky football end, via the knockout route in the final bout.

Practically all of the boxers entered in the tournament have arrived in Boston and are being quartered at the Copley Square Hotel. The trainers in charge of the youngsters will put their charges through limbering-up exercises at the B. A. A. today, and will take them on sight-seeing tours Sunday.

EASTERNERS FORMIDABLE.

New York and Pittsburgh have sent a formidable group of boxers, the most notable of the group being Patsy Ruffalo of the Salem Crescent Club of New York. Ruffalo, who fights in the 126-pound class, has defeated all of the boys he has faced so far this season, and stands a good chance of copping the national title.

So large has the entry list grown that Chairman William H. Cuddy of the American Amateur Boxing Committee has ordered the first bout to get under way at 5 o'clock Monday afternoon.

137 FIVES TRY FOR LAURELS

The amateur basketball tournament being conducted by the Boys' Club of Boston, at its gymnasium in Charlestown, has exceeded by far the record number of entries which were received last year. The tourney for the youthful hoopsters which commences Monday and continues until a winner is decided through the process of elimination, has 137 quintets entered.

Each evening four or five games will be played. The schedule for next week is listed as follows:

Monday—Brighton Associates 2d vs. Y. M. C. A. Shamrocks of Somerville; Village Juniors of B. Y. M. C. A. vs. Taylor's All-Stars of Everett; Malden City Club vs. Centrals of Brockton.

Tuesday—Hamilton Associates vs. St. Chrysostom Jrs. of Quincy; Everett Apaches vs. Troop 1 of B. Y. M. C. A.; Boston Comets vs. Cyclones of Chelsea; Polish Young Men's Club vs. Arlington A. A.

Wednesday—Passaics of Cambridge vs. Somerville Okos; Troop 7 of St. Agnes of Arlington vs. Pals Club of B. Y. M. C. A.; Liberty A. A. of M. E. Union vs. Reading A. C.; Bunker Hill Cubs vs Braves of Everett.

Thursday—Chelsea A. A. vs. Lincoln Five of Somerville; Greenleaf Wanderers of Roxbury vs. Cantab A. A. Bearcats of Cambridge; Apache A. A. of Brockton vs. Victory A. A. of Boston; Shawmut A. C. of Charlestown vs. Cantab A. A.

Saturday—Cambridge Eagle Jrs. vs. Boys' Club Midgets; Troop 9 vs. Belwyn Associates of Boston; Yankee Club vs. Quincy Panthers; Union Rangers of Winthrop vs. Whirlwinds of Charlestown.

Schaefer Now Near Victory

New York, April 3 (I.N.S.).—Jake Schaefer, who lost his 18.2 balkline billiard championship to Erich Hagenlacher, of Germany, a few weeks ago, was on the threshold of new honors today. He needed only 400 points to lift the 18:1 title from Willie Hoppe while the champion needed 1,233 points to retain his only remaining championship, which he won for the first time twenty years ago.

With only two more blocks remaining of the 3,600-point match, Schaefer had scored 3,000 points to Hoppe's 2,367. After beating Willie yesterday afternoon, 300 to 262 Schaefer ran out the night game in four innings, to win, 300 to 35. Schaefer averaged 75 in the night block.

To Arrest Officials of Tampa Jockey Club

TAMPA, Fla., April 3 (A.P.)—The sheriff of Hillsborough County today held capiases for the arrest of forty men officials and employes of the West Coast Jockey Club on charges of gambling and conspiracy.

The capiases were issued after a bill of information was filed in criminal court by the county solicitor, who has already made two unsuccessful attempts to close the race track. More than twenty prominent Tampa citizens were witnesses.

Among those cited are Harvey Meyers, president of the club, who is from Covington, Ky., and H. H. "Flash" Covington, former star football player with Centre College. Covington has been selling premier tickets at the race tracks.

The race track here is operating under the supersedas granted by the Supreme Court to an injunction which was gotten in County Court.

CONWAY WITH SOX

The Outlook for 1926. Fohls Are Going Forward. Team Has Real Spirit.

By JACK CONWAY

Louisville, Ky., April 3.—How do the 1926 Red Sox look?

We feel that we can grapple with this query after having seen the Fohls in six weeks of training.

Jack Conway

Nobody connected with the Red Sox is claiming the club will win the American League pennant, or that it will finish in the first division. We believe the Sox officials are using very good judgment. The team is in the process of being rebuilt, and cannot hope to beat out nearly finished baseball machines like the Athletics, Senators, Tigers and Browns. Strange to say, the Yankees, even with Babe Ruth clouting the ball, are not receiving serious consideration from pennant pickers.

This writer believes the Sox will finish somewhere in the second division. Those experts who have already come out boldly and declared Bob Quinn's outfit will be in the cellar when the flag fight ends in the Johnson circuit may receive a severe jolt.

Fohl has the youngest ball club in the big leagues. He has got rid of the dead wood which failed to produce in 1925 and has surrounded himself with young, hustling ball players. You can see improvement in most of the recruits from day to day. Of course the new players are making mistakes, but this has been true of rookies since back to the days when Pop Anson and Mike Kelley busted into the National pastime.

The Sox players are ambitious as well as young. They realize they have an excellent opportunity to win regular berths with a big league club. As their youth and ambition is supported by real baseball ability they will topple many a pennant aspirant before the season ends.

The infield is much stronger than it was last year. Phil Todt will be found at first base. He drove in more runs than any other Sox player last season. He is a quiet, determined ballplayer of the Harry Hooper type and should keep right on improving.

Herrera, the Cuban, and McCann will probably divide the duties at second base. They will form a much more powerful keystone combination than Fohl had in 1925.

Dudley Lee at shortstop is playing a better game this year than ever. He will have to do so to ward off the rush of Jack Rothrock, youthful Californian. Rothrock is as fast as a deer on the bases, while he is a good batter. He doesn't measure up to Lee as an fielder, but experience may improve him in this respect.

The chief strength of the infield is at third base. Fred Haney, with four years' experience at Detroit, is a smart ball player and a dangerous batter in the pinches. He is the best third baseman the Sox have had since the palmy days of Larry Gardner.

Tom Jenkins, who is fielding his position well and hitting the ball hard, will start the season in left field. Flagstead probably will be the selection for centre field, while Rosenthal, Carlyle, Bratchi and Langford are battling for the right field berth. Carlyle's hitting strength has him out in front now, but one of the other players mentioned may come strong during the next ten days and take the berth away from him.

Ehmke, Wingfield, Ruffing, Zahniser, Welzer and Lundgren of the pitchers have shown the most stuff this year in the order named. It looks as though the Fohls would have good hurling strength, especially with Ehmke in the best condition of his career.

Alex Gaston will bolster up the team behind the bat. He is fine mechanical catcher and also has intelligence.

Al Stokes will do duty when Ehmke is pitching. Fohl has granted Howard's request to have Stokes act as his regular catcher this season.

Bischoff has the edge on Moore and Horan in the scramble for the other backstop position.

Then don't overlook Walter Shaner, most promising of the Sox recruits who can play the outfield and also the infield. His batting will help the club when he gets back into the game.

Court Semi-Finals Today

Chicago, April 3 (I.N.S.).—Four State championship teams, representing Fitchburg, Mass., Salem S. D., Pueblo, Col., and Fargo, N. D., will engage in a finish fight at the University of Chicago today for the interscholastic basketball supremacy of the United States. These teams qualified for the semifinals by defeating four strong quintets in yesterday's stirring fourth round play.

Fitchburg—the lone Eastern survivor—meets Salem at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the first half of the semifinal event. At 3 o'clock Pueblo and Fargo play the other semifinal. The two winning teams meet at 9:30 tonight for the national championship.

MISS MORRILL WINS SINGLES NET TITLE

Miss Marjorie Morrill of Boston won two national tennis titles today when she defeated Miamme Palfrey in the National Girls' Indoor Singles championship and later when paired with Lee Palfrey, sister of Miamme, defeated Sarah and Miamme Palfrey in the National Girls' Doubles championship.

In both matches the winners were forced to the limit to win. Miss Morrill only won the singles title after going three sets, the scores of which were 6—2, 1—6, 6—1. The score of the doubles match was 7—5, 7—5.

Miamme Palfrey in the second set was off to a flying start and got her opponent on the run. She maneuvered her into difficult positions for return both of service and fore hand shots and won the set 6—1. Miss Morrill steadied down in the third and deciding set and gave her opponent little chance to show the same brand of tennis as was displayed in the second encounter.

Miss Palfrey ran the first game to duece and that was the outstanding happening. Miss Morrill broke through her service each time she took to the base line and carried off the title as a result.

In the doubles match, it was the weakness of Miamme Palfrey that [illegible] sister team to defeat. In the second set the Palfrey girls were leading four love also five to three but could not hold their advantage.

Flashes From the Training Camps

Rogers Hornsby's St. Louis Cardinals are having an enjoyable time in the South with the Texas League ball clubs. Yesterday the Cards won their 20th game, beating Fort Worth and freely admit they will beat the Dallas nine today.

Connie Mack's Athletics arrived in the Quaker City ready to meet the Phillies today in the first game of a Round Robin series. He announced that an improved ball club will make a bid for the American League pennant this year.

Catcher Henline, who refused to accompany the Phils South, has signed a contract.

With Bob Shawkey on the mound the Yankees breezed along trampling over the Brooklyn Dodgers again in Nashville yesterday. Babe Ruth had a bad day, fanning twice.

Bill Terry, the only holdout on the Giants' roster, searched Memphis in vain for Manager John McGraw with the intention of talking terms. The New Yorkers play Memphis today.

Ty Cobb of the Detroit Tigers is batting for the grand average of .500, getting one hit in two trips to the plate during the club's practice game, at Augusta yesterday. The Bengals start North tomorrow night.

The Cincinnati Reds are divided at Dayton Beach today to decide the club championship, the vets and colts having four games each to their credit. Red Lucas, formerly of the Braves, will take his turn on the rubber, Manager Hendricks announced.

Both Chicago teams annexed victories on Good Friday, the White Sox downing Shreveport and the Cubs going eleven frames to defeat the Hollywood Stars at Los Angeles.

Benny Carr and Miller are scheduled to pitch today for the Cleveland Indians against the New Orleans Pelicans.

Ignore Dempsey In Presenting Title Belts

NEW YORK, April 3 (I.N.S.).—Jack Dempsey will be the only champion who will not be honored by the presentation of a silk championship belt at the first annual dinner of the Boxing Writers' Association of Greater New York on April 25. It became known today that the boxing writers had decided to defer recognition of Dempsey until such time as he becomes active in defence of his title.

SUGGS TO HELP AT BENEFIT

When various committees are beset with the problem of finding places on the program for volunteer acts, it's indication of the high quality of the offering. This is what confronts the committees working to make a success of the Frank J. Comeau benefit at the Arena next Thursday night, the proceeds of which will be turned over to the widow and children of the slain patrolman.

So generous have been the boxers, singers, orchestras and bands in their desire to assist, that Representative Bernard "Dick" Casey, chairman of the general committee, states that it will be the most elaborate program ever offered here.

Chick Suggs, the sensational featherweight of New Bedford, has announced he would like to assist at the benefit. George Freeman, chairman of the boxing committee, will place the little flash on the program.

Volunteers from all lines of entertainment continue to offer their services in the boxing end of the bill. Boston's most prominent announcers, Johnny Hallahan, Eddie Morris and Dan Barry, have offered to help out. With the boxers, referees, announcers, timers and seconds all lined up, those who attend the benefit are going to see the flower of the New England game.

Those who wish to aid the fund should make checks payable to John J. Lyons, treasurer of the Frank J. Comeau Fund at the Fields Corner branch of the First National Bank.

EHMKE TO HURL FULL GAME TODAY

By JACK CONWAY

Louisville, Ky., April 3.—Howard Ehmke, the big siege gun of the Red Sox pitching artillery, is being primed for the opening game of the season against the Yankees, at Fenway Park, and April 13.

Lee Fohl tipped his hand when he announced that Ehmke would pitch the full nine innings against Louisville today. It will be the first time that any of the Sox flingers have been asked to go the full route.

Ehmke is in the best condition he has been in for several years. He was twelve pounds heavier than he was a year ago when he reported for practice at New Orleans. Howard is well able to carry 190 pounds, as he is six feet three inches tall.

Al Stokes will be on the receiving end of the battery today. He will work whenever Ehmke pitches this coming season.

Fohl also stated that Si Rosenthal would play right field in place of Roy Carlyle. Rosenthal seems to have come out of his batting slump and is making a strong bid for the right field berth.

It is expected that Herrera and McCann will divide the duties at second base.

The Sox have started to hit the ball, and will make things interesting for the Louisville pitchers. Besides the game today, the Fohls will battle Louisville tomorrow Monday and Tuesday. The Sox entrain for Boston Tuesday night.

FLATLEY WITH BRAVES

Geo. Mogridge Tantalizing Pitcher Ready to Start

By NICK FLATLEY

Washington, April 3.—George Mogridge, dean of the Brave athletes, will have more than anybody in the National League this year. That's the collective opinion of sundry players and experts who know how Ol' George tosses a baseball and have watched him return to form this Spring.

Nick Flatley

Mogridge is one of baseball's most tantalizing pitchers. He throws the marble a million and one different ways. He's overhand, side-arm and underhand. He's fast and slow, and has such control that batters are inclined to think he has strings tied to the balls he pitches.

Andy High and Bernie Neis, two of the Braves who have been in the league for quite a stretch, admit that the circuit hasn't any pitcher just like Mogridge.

"He'd make anybody dizzy," explains Andy, "up there at the plate. You never can tell where the ball is coming from. When you try to think ahead of him, George crosses you up and then laughs."

Bucky Harris of the Senators, Roger Bresnahan of the Giants and others all concede the Braves a treasure in the venerable southpaw who seems to be ready for a great comeback.

"Just watch Mogridge with some of the heavy hitters in our league," says Dave Bancroft. "He makes them cuckoo. I can hear Jack Fournier popping and roaring when George begins to fiddle around. Jack likes to have the ball over and take his sock.

"George waits and fusses until a nervous batter is pop-eyed. Then he shoots in something that isn't looked for. The ability to putter and stall seems to be a peculiar gift of the smart left-hander. And Mogridge is one of the smartest pitchers I've been with for quite a while."

George himself doesn't do a bit of chattering about his chances. He has been sawing wood quietly, so to speak, and is just as anxious to deliver as the veriest rookie. He contracted to get in shape for the opening of the season, or take his way back to the minors, and he lived up to his part of it.

He will be ready to start games in the opening series, and until something happens to him will take a regular turn in the box. He's a chap who pitches without effort and consequently goes through a game without any great physical strain.

Mogridge worked six innings against the St. Louis Browns, the team that let him out last season, and was going just as strongly in the sixth as he was at the start. That's a remarkable Spring performance for any veteran. Most of the old boys toss the ball two or three frames and call it a day.

Mogridge wanted to go the full route, but was yanked out after he had demonstrated his fitness to be considered a real member of the classy Brave staff.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER E. HORTON

Swinging a golf club back and forth with easy swings in order to observe the natural action of arms, wrists, hands and body with the club, will not fail to school the player also in the amount of time required for the club to complete its swing. Perhaps the commonest breaking down point in the swing with average golfers is found in the fact that they allow the club too little time to make its full sweep. In anxiety to smite the ball they rush the swing, and a mere chop results. Study that point particularly when you make easy swings. Now and then rush a swing, just for your own information, and observe what happens to the club. The rush of action paralyzes it. Observe also the moment of time the club must have to reverse its direction at the top.

BROWN FOOTBALL SYSTIM FOR B. U. GRID STARS

Critics See Bright Prospects for New Grid Regime

By EDDIE DONDERO

Boston University will no longer be considered only a good workout by the so-called big college gridiron tornadoes which annually class the Terriers as "soft pickings." That was the consensus of opinion [illegible] by Hub's sport fandom following the appointment of Reggie Brown and Edward M. Robinson as coaches of the Intown University.

"We will continue with our usual system that we used so effectively at Brown. I will handle the back field candidates and act as scout. Making predictions as to the future at this stage would be just as dangerous as leading the queen of spades in a heart game," said Reggie Brown.

"With Hilary Mahoney and Reggie Brown a first class club will be developed. We will make a good showing against the big colleges and I will train the line aspirants," declared Edward N. Robinson.

Along with these statements George Brown added a little optimism to the matter by announcing that B. U. would profit immensely with such instructors as Mahoney, Robinson and Brown handling the assignments. "We are due to make [illegible] provided that an even share of the breaks is afforded us," declared Brown.

Plans for Spring football practice were under way immediately after George V. Brown, athletic supervisor at B. U., made the announcement that Robinson and Brown had been signed. Undergraduates, students, alumni and [illegible] the faculty sat up and took [illegible] with the general approval of the announcement which clarifies the coaching situation, which was in gloom, everybody was made happy.

During the past few years the B. U. gridiron gladiators were used as a dress rehearsal by the teams which often swept them off their feet. Hilary Mahaney was lured from Holy Cross to coach the ends, assisting Doc Whalen, who, in the capacity of head coach, made every possible effort to stamp out the various difficulties.

The resignation of Whelan was accepted, due to his illness which prevented him from returning this year. This shuffle made way for Brown and Robinson, regarded as two of the greatest mentors in the East.

When Griffo Fought in Saloon

Young Griffo won on a foul in the fourteenth round from Patsey Sweeney, March 6, [illegible] of Harlem.

It was a ripping fight from start to finish, both taking an awful gruelling, and when the unexpected happened every sport in the little room was breaking his neck looking for a knockout.

It was [illegible] o'clock in the afternoon when the boys shook hands and started the ball rolling.

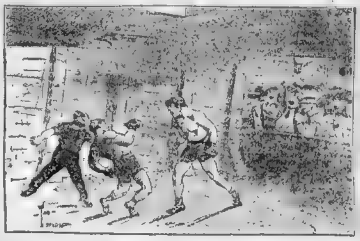
At 2 o'clock the little hall, or rather room, was pretty well filled with sports and business men from the section, and we waited and waited. Some thought the delay might cause the cops to get jerry, but for a change not one had a peek.

The sports came in one by one, and as there were only about one hundred present the crowd did not gather in bunches nor act [illegible].

Such an arena as it was, too. In one corner was a stove going in full blast. In another was a disabled pool table with chairs, boxes and other refuse piled up.

The managers of the fighters were in another corner putting up their side bet with the stakeholder and the fighters were behind them putting on their tights and spreading the resin on the floor.

When [illegible] it was discovered that the matchmaker had forgotten the gloves, so one of the seconds was sent out with a basket to get them. He returned after a wait of about ten minutes with a piece covering the gloves in the basket and then all the boys took their [illegible] long breath and quieted down as the referee yelled: "Let her go."



Griffo had every advantage over the little Irish fighter, being taller, heavier and having a longer reach.

They started to fight from the moment time was called, and it was one long [illegible] until time was called again. Sweeney stayed in close, shooting his right over on Griffo's kidneys with great effect, in return stopping left jabs to the face without wincing.

From the first to the fourteenth this style of battle prevailed and it was the toughest, [illegible] and fastest go seen in private in this city for many a day. Griffo, who was the cleverer of the pair, stuck in with Patsey in the manner for seven rounds until the time over his kidneys began to [illegible]. He was weakening under the pummeling, and thought it better to pull away and fight at long range after that. He did, and it looked as though Mr. Sweeney of Manchester [illegible] at any moment. Griffo would get in close a while and then [illegible] away and deeply, letting out with left and right flush to his opponent's jaw. Sweeney bounced around like a rubber ball, but came in just as gamely as ever.

Griffo [illegible] Patsey in the clinches and Sweeney complained to the referee, but [illegible] Griffo and let [illegible].

From the [illegible] the [illegible] Griffo staggered Patsey quite regularly, keeping away from the heavy body punching as well as he could and making it a long range fight.

At the finish of the [illegible] round there was a hot mix and both fell over on the hot stove, knocking it over and spreading the coals over the floor.

Both were rather weak and [illegible] from the [illegible] and the fight was one of those [illegible] with [illegible] every blow.

The fight went along like this [illegible] the fourteenth round, when suddenly Griffo [illegible] to the floor [illegible] foul. His seconds jumped up [illegible] and there were many who claimed that Sweeney [illegible] Griffo.

After [illegible] the crowd quieted down and then the referee declared [illegible] Tad won.

BRAVES EXPECT TO FINISH NEAR TOP

By NICK FLATLEY

Washington, D. C., April 3.—Se[illegible] has meant passing [illegible] fame to quite a few [illegible] of the ages—[illegible] Nero and [illegible] It should mean a lot of victories and big crowds [illegible] certain [illegible]

[illegible] season at the [illegible] advance signs [illegible] We have been with ball clubs before that came hopefully out of the south. But there was always the element of doubt, the hope that the breaks [illegible] and help along some [illegible]

There's no doubt manifest in this squad. The players, both veterans [illegible] look for a good year [illegible] team will have to fin[illegible] in the first division and may [illegible] real fight for the pennant if all goes well.

NO COCKINESS.

Too much optimism isn't good for a ball club, but the Braves base theirs on facts and have none of the cockiness that one frequently [illegible] a harsh and unex[illegible] The Spring record [illegible] against big league opposition, has helped the [illegible] to feel their oats. They believe they have a ball club. They will carry that notion into the campaign, and if they're not abused of it quickly, they will proceed to be a tough outfit to beat.

Old timers like Dick Rudolph and Manager Bancroft, don't pay great attention to Spring results, but they do know that spirit means much in [illegible] and they glow outwardly as they hear the kids talking things over.

Arthur Devlin, coach and scout, who was playing in the dark ages, is one of the leading optimists. Arthur has been with champions and tailenders, and is cagey about boosting. This spring, though, his enthusiasm has broken loose [illegible] large chunks.

"I watched the Braves finish last year," Arthur tells anyone who will listen, "and believe me, they were a good ball club. They went just as fast as the Pirates at the finish. They're a better club now with the season about to start. There's no doubt of it.

"Big Brownie gives the club a real punch. Little Gautreau was a wonder when he started, and will be more than that with the experience back of him. He'll get a million passes. Riconda makes the club look good at third, and Wilson is big league outfielder.

HAVE PITCHING.

"Pitching means more than anything else in the game, and the Braves sure have it. They had it last year, when they started to come. They will be much better in the box this year. They gave away Barnes, but they have three new tossers who look like sure things.

A club that loses one pitcher and picks up three gains a whole lot. I haven't seen many teams come up from camp two pitchers ahead of the game, let alone anything else. We have Mogridge, Wertz and Hearn ready to go. And I mean ready.

"I don't know what a scout gets out of a world series, but I think I'll find out within two years at the outside. This team is on the way. All it needs is a start."

Firpo Expects to Beat Spalla

Buenos Aires, April 3 (A.P.).—Luis Angel Firpo, "the Wild Bull of the Pampas," expects to defeat Erminio Spalla of Italy in their fifteen round bout tonight, but he anticipates that he will have a stronger man against him than when he tucked away the heavyweight champion of Europe to sleep two years ago in fourteen rounds.

Both Firpo and Spalla are declared to be in splendid condition for the fray. Firpo has been training for some months under the tutelage of [illegible], the millionaire sports [illegible] who was his mentor when Jack Dempsey knocked him out in the Polo Grounds at New York.

Spalla has been in Argentina for a month conditioning himself. In [illegible] he has specialized on [illegible] to offset the wild charges of Firpo.

Firpo's followers predict that he will win by a knockout within five rounds.

Kirby Hopes to Meet Berlenbach

Fired with a new ambition which [illegible] he will ultimately result in a Summer meeting with Paul Berlenbach for the light heavyweight championship of the world, Tom Kirby of Roxbury will start his campaign against Tommy Loughran of Philadelphia on Monday night, April 5, in the feature bout of the Boston Arena Club's opening show at the local rink.

The remarkable change in the style and spirit of Kirby since he joined Dan Carroll's stable has been one of the amazing developments of the year in local ring circles. Kirby [illegible] acquired that viciousness so necessary to success in the ring.

[illegible] has always held a high rating as a boxer. When he combines [illegible] aggressive [illegible] a most formidable [illegible] This is precisely the same style Kirby is going to face when he goes into Tommy Loughran.

Johnny had an allowance of ten cents a week.

Every Saturday he received it, and every Saturday night he was bankrupt.

One morning his mother said, handing him the usual coin:

"Now, Johnny, do see if you can't save a little of this till next week. Don't spend it all at once."

"All right," agreed Young Hopeful. That night she said to him:

"Well, how about the allowance?"

Johnny looked sheepish. "It's all gone, Mother."

"What!"

"Yes. But, oh, Mother!" and Johnny's eyes shone, "I have lived like a prince!"

Johnny had never learned the advantages of a budget!

It's fine to have a grand time and live like a prince, if you do not have any of the responsibilities of this life. Johnny had a father and mother to buy food and shelter, to pay for clothes and doctors' bills.

But most of us have to meet our own expenses, and if we live like princes while our money lasts, we are in danger of having to live like beggars when it is gone!

Which would you rather be—a beggar or a budgeteer?

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Mrs. H. J. M. wants a budget for $55 a week, two adults, four children. Lives in country, which necessitates $15 railroad fare to Boston, also paying for own home.

It is wonderful to have the children in the country, but the big item for transportation offsets lower shelter cost. Paying for your home may be considered savings. Shelter, $10; food, $18.75; clothing, $9; operating, $8; personal, $3.75; savings (insurance) $5.50.

Home Budget Editor—My salary is $50 a week, two adults, seven small children, rent $66, coal $32, insurance $2.53, food $35, laundry $2, milk $8. Would like to save for myself but can't. MRS. E. F.

Your food bill comes to half your income; your rental is more than your weekly income. These two items should be reduced, if you are to allow fair proportions for the other necessities. Try this. Shelter $10.38; savings $5 (your insurance) food, $16.62; clothing, $7; operating $6; personal, $5.

Mrs. M. B. P. writes that her family of five are paying $8 a week toward taxes and interest on their house, including co-operative bank payments on a first mortgage; $2 a week for a bond, $2.25 for insurance, $5.50 for gas, electricity, coal and telephone, and $15 a week for food. Husband keeps out $5 a week for smokes and carfares, and they have only $1.25 a week left for clothing, doctor's bills and incidentals: They owe $111.

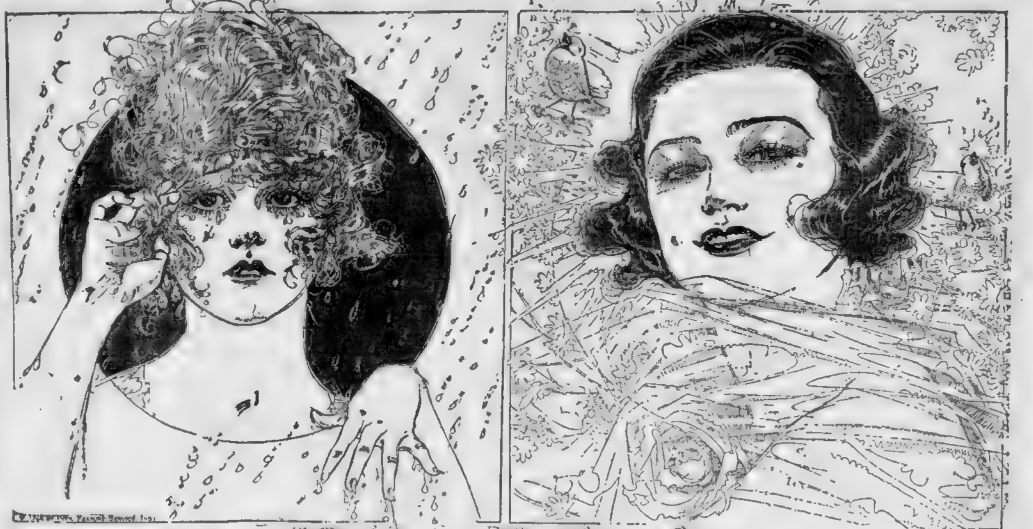
The rent is moderate and includes some saving, as you are really buying your house out of it. Other saving total $4.25 a week, quite a burden with your other expenses. In your place I would rather use the bond money to pay my debts and try to save more later. Your food allowance is high, although your menus are very sensible. Sometimes children increase food costs greatly by eating between meals. Give them plain bread and butter if they are really hungry between meals. Here is a trial budget: Saving, $4.25, including payments on debt; shelter, $8; food, $13; clothing $4.50; operating, $4; personal, $4.25, including husband's smokes and recreation for the family.

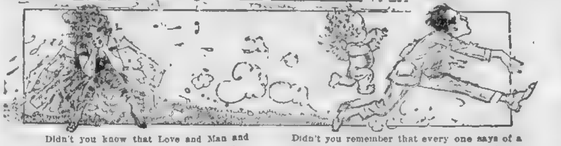
Home Budget Editor—My husband makes $36 a week and we can't seem to save money. We pay $18 rent and $2 gas bill. MRS. M. G.

If the rates you have given are by the month they are very reasonable. Your rent comes to $4.17 a week. Your gas bill comes under "operating." Try this: Save $4, rent $4.17; food, $9.50; clothing, $6.83, operating, $5.50; personal, $6.

Nobody Loves the "Rain-Girl"

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY





LOVE and a man go marching down the road of Time. Love is never old and the Man is young or old, which ever. Between them they have a bit of cheese and bread and a coin or two, or else if the man has been very busy a fig pudding, a flask of wine and a fat gold bag. And they are casting wide eyes each side of the trail for the Woman though they would never admit it, no!

And let me tell you that when they sight that maiden called the Rain-girl, adcrouched up on the side of the road dewing the flowers in the grass at her feet with her tears they fly past that spot as fast as ever they can, pat, pat, with never a word.

Didn't you know that nobody loves the rain-girl? The girl who is always just a little bit low hearted, who has just had a headache, or who says the sun is too hot, or the wind is too cold, who wishes she had chosen an old blue dress instead of the flamingo pink one she did; who lays a clinging hand on the arm of all the World and weeps on his coat sleeve.

Didn't you know that Love and Man and the World joyfully hasten their footsteps when they lift into sight the shape of the sunny girl, the girl with the humorous eyes, the woeless lips, the girl with the sunrise behind her head and the birds singing in her voice? Didn't you remember that though you are glad to give your friend a warm hand up in his trouble you don't want his trouble to spread out thin and last forever?

You are glad when he begins to smile again.

Didn't you remember that every one says of a certain young chap you know, "He's always good to see, he's always happy?" That they uttered of a girl whose name you spoke, "Oh, yes, she is always 'splendid,' and everything's 'all right' with her"? That Love and a Man fell in love with a girl once, and what they said of her all naively, was "Though she's not a 'funny' girl, nothing ever makes her tired"?

"If it rains she likes rain, if it sunshines she is so glad it isn't raining THIS day; if it snows she is only sorry for hungry birds and the cold drivers. If the car breaks down she can smile and help; if it rains on her new bonnet and you forget an umbrella and curse yourself for a bumpkin, she manages a giggle and forgets the bonnet.

"If the road is long she sees e[illegible] bloom on the tree-tops and forgets the d[illegible] feet."

Didn't you know that though t[illegible] in the world who love best and last [illegible] pity they are not many? And even [illegible] woe must be the woe of a child, s[illegible] away with sun through the tears [illegible] Love linger through pity and fr[illegible] Love, when the maid in her trouble ca[illegible] brave heart under it and tries h[illegible] shine her smile through the black [illegible] must wear. Sympathy and love from man to man goes heartiest, when the man in trouble keeps the bottle his bad genii lives in corked!

Nobody loves the rain girl. So 'ware—little sister. —NELL BRINKLEY.

The Making of a Husband, an Interesting Serial, By Ann Lisle

I TURNED, and in the doorway I saw the loveliest patriarchal old gentleman I have beheld since dear "Father Andrew" Hyland passed on. Something impelled me to go forward and greet him as if we were old friends, and when strong hands gripped mine and a rich voice spoke, I knew that I had found a real friend:

"I am Dr. Willis," said the fine old chap quietly. "And I hope I've taken my fine snow shoe tramp 'cross lots in order to visit long neglected neighbors and not to treat any patients."

The rich voice roused Jim to call: "Howdy, Doctor Willis. All you need do for this patient is give him a hand-shake, and then you can go up to Perry. My wife—Mrs. Harrison here—got me around in a jiffy."

"Her smile ought to thaw all the frost bites in the neighborhood," smiled the doctor, and then he gave Jim his requested prescription and followed me upstairs to Nicholas Perry's bedside.

Just as we started up the stairs I heard a clear yodel, and then the front door was jerked open by Tarasov, and Arlette Valleau came drifting in like a snow sprite. I saw a tableau followed by a kaleidoscopic change.

Tarasov blocked Arlette's path for a moment. She reached up, tweaked his whiskers and then slipped by him into the doorway of the studio. And I stopped involuntarily while what followed was photographed on my mind.

Jim looked up. His face mellowed. Then it was fairly illuminated as he cried breathlessly:

"Little Arlette! Is it really you? "You look too good to be true."

The child started forward, fell on her knees at Jim's side, lifted his hand and carried it to her lips. She murmured something I could not hear. And then she fairly toppled back with the strangest look on her face I have ever seen. It was not fear that changed her face so. It was something rapt, inspired—the look painters sometimes show on the face of the little maid of Domremy. But in another moment Arlette frowned, looked intent on blotting out the illumination that had made her so spiritual, and then I heard Bertie Lingard crying:

"Come to [illegible] It's little Arlette. Nothing is too good to be true today."

Then I became conscious of Dr. Willis, and that I was blocking the stairs and keeping him from Nicholas Perry.

"I beg your pardon," I said. "I'm a great hand to day dream. And so much is going on here now that I have to keep winding myself up again every few minutes."

The doctor's answer was an odd one. It seemed like an evil omen. He appeared not to have heard me, not to realize I could hear him as he murmured:

"Little Arlette Valleau. Rosine's daughter! I wonder if sorrow will follow wherever she goes?"

"You know Arlette's mother?" I asked of the old patriarch who had come to pay a professional visit to Nicholas Perry.

Dr. Willis started. It was evident he had forgotten me and had fancied he was talking to himself when he commented on Rosine—Arlette's mother and how she always brought sorrow with her wherever she went.

"I know her well," he said. "Poor unhappy creature! The only real joy her life ever knew was [illegible] joy that came from the devotion of good Tarasov."

"Is that how Lingard happened to go to you when he realized Nicholas Perry's needs?" I said without troubling to make my conversation consecutive.

Dr. Willis answered me in the same fashion. We followed each other. We took much for granted. And I knew that in talking in this disjointed and [illegible] the fine old man and I were showing how much of friendship we had compassed in a moment—in climbing part of a flight of stairs.

"Tarasov is my friend. I am proud to call him that," Dr. Willis said. "He has a healthy spirit in a clean body and a childlish mind that cannot think evil. Nicholas Perry played football at college. He has a healthy body, too—but the mind in it needs curing. We will see what we can do for Benvenuto Cellini."

"My husband called him that," I said half to myself.

Then I opened the door and led Dr. Willis into the bedroom where Nicholas Perry lay. For a moment I was sufficiently in the lead to keep Mr. Perry from realizing that there was anyone with me.

"I didn't get a chance to tell Jeanie," he muttered. "Lingard butted in. Came to say he had the Doc. Long tramp. Tarasov was [illegible] to warm the medico up a bit with coffee or soup or what not. I really think you [illegible] have to [illegible] her—"

He broke off. His face [illegible]. It looked almost apoplectic for a moment. Then his eyes shifted. And of a sudden his voice rang out [illegible]:

"Well, if it isn't good old Doc Jabez! [illegible] Tarasov fetched you. Welcome, Doc. Come and give me the once over. Tell me if I'm ever going to use these paws again."

He gestured toward the two useless looking lumps that lay on the coverlet.

"[illegible] Lingard brought me to [illegible]," Dr. Willis replied [illegible]. Then turning to me he added quietly:

ON "BEING FOXY IN FURS"

WOMEN WHO WANT TO LOOK WELL IN FURS
MIGHT take a look
At the ANIMALS the
Fur COMES FROM with MUCH PROFIT,
For ANIMALS wear furs
With FAR MORE
DISTINCTION THAN the MAJORITY of WOMEN
In the first place,
When an ANIMAL
Wears FUR it looks
NATURAL.

Of course, IF the fur
FITTED the woman like
it fits AN ANIMAL,
The woman would STILL
Look funny; for a fur
Coat on an animal
Is SIMPLY MADE
To cover ITS BONES,
But SOME WOMEN have
So much more
To HIDE,
It is no wonder so many
Of the poor animals get
Skinned to death.

Why an Electric Refrigerator?

GREETINGS, everybody!

Remember the hot day last Summer when you wanted to take the children for a swim but didn't dare to till the iceman came! Remember the food you gave away to the neighbors before starting on that four day motor trip because you knew it would all spoil in the ice chest before you could get home? Remember how the ice chest drain pipe smelled every time you had to clean it out? (It proved so conclusively that there must have been germ life present.) And remember the [illegible] you have breathed while cleaning up the ice gentleman's footprints on the floor of hall or kitchen?

The answers to these questions are just a few of the answers to "Why an Electric Refrigerator This Year?"

Time was when an electrified ice box was a luxury beyond the means of the average purse—maybe you have the impression that it still is. Not so. It would take me just about two shakes of a lamb's tail to show you on paper how you can have a cooling unit installed in your present ice box and enjoy all the comforts and conveniences of electric refrigeration at no more than your usual monthly ice bill.

I don't know of anything more aggravating in the world than to watch money melt away from a refrigerator, do you? And no matter how carefully we watch and pay every so often it doesn't seem [illegible] sixteen times faster than we had calculated — result — expensive food spoilage and more inconvenience.

Then, too, the offensive odor left in the chest after one of these disappearing acts raises the question in our minds whether anything that left so disagreeable a trail could have been safe for our drinking water? There's always the lurking danger of ice from contaminated ponds and germs acquired while the ice is in transit through dirty streets and often in a none too clean wagon.

As I've said before, I'm not unappreciative of the good friend that the faithful iceman has been to us in the past—but I do believe that before very long for most of us he will be as dim a memory as the kerosene lamp, the back-yard pump and the horse and buggy.

Of course it is a fact that the initial cost of an electrical refrigerator, including box and cooling unit, is greater than that of an old fashioned ice chest—but a furnace costs more than a stove, and an automobile more than a horse and buggy. This hasn't kept the stove and the horse and buggy in use, though, has it?

All the histories of modern housekeeping methods show that if there is a better way, the American housewife wants it—and electric refrigeration is without question the better, safer way for preserving foods in the home. It is as dependable and trouble free as your electric lights. It is entirely automatic. It keeps your refrigerator at the zone of safety—ten degrees lower than any cold that ice can create. It creates a dry cold that preserves perishable foods weeks and months without deterioration. It will make pure clear ice cubes for table use, as well as delicious frozen desserts, without the mess of ice and salt and the elbow grease and back breaking effort of turning the crank. It is not an experiment. I know of one electric refrigerator that has been in active service for ten years and could be sold today for at least half its original cost. I know of another that has been working four years without a call on the service man.

And these are not rare instances. Literally thousands of homes, stores and apartment houses enjoy electrical refrigeration 365 days in the year. The wise landlord is equipping his properties with these modern cooling systems, realizing that a house or apartment that depends on ice for the preservation of food will be more difficult to rent.

Some day I am going to try to explain the mechanical mysteries of these wonder workers—even to the thermostat that saves so much electricity for you. Your electrical refrigerator will not keep the wheels of your electric meter going 'round all the time, you know. No, indeed. The busy little thermostat will automatically shut off the power when your box reaches the proper degree of coldness. Then, when you start getting dinner and have the doors open frequently and the temperature goes up a little bit, the thermostat turns the power on again for you. You are really only using power about quarter of the time.

I'm making a collection of all kinds of interesting booklets on these electric refrigerators because every mail proves to me that it's a vastly interesting subject to the up-to-date housewife. Just drop me a line if you would like some copies.

And that's all from Martha today. Adios.

COULD NOT PUT ON HER SHOES

Mrs. Daugherty Was so Weak

In a little town of the Middle West, was a discouraged woman. For four months she had been in such poor health that she could not stoop to put on her own shoes. Unable to do her work, unable to go out of doors or enjoy a friendly chat with her neighbors, life seemed dark indeed to Mrs. Daugherty.

Then one day, a booklet was left at her front door. Idly she turned the pages. Soon she was reading with quickened interest. The little booklet was filled with letters from women in conditions similar to hers who had found better health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I began taking the Vegetable Compound," Mrs. Daugherty writes, "and after I took the third bottle, I found relief. I am on my eleventh bottle and I don't have that trouble any more, and feel like a different woman. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to everyone I see who has trouble like mine. I am willing to answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—MRS. ED. DAUGHERTY, 1208 Orchard Ave., Muscatine, Iowa.

A PIRATE OF HEARTS :: By Beatrice Burton

The Thrilling Love Story of a Boston Girl and the Husband Who Strayed

READ THIS FIRST:

SYLVIA STARR, employed at the Boston Public Library, has been engaged to RANDALL PHELPS, Boston real estate man, for a year when he asks her to free him because he has fallen in love with her chum, FAY SHIRLEY, a Beacon Hill flirt.

Heartbroken, Sylvia gives him up, to the great satisfaction of AUNT AGNES ("Aunt Agony"), the old maid who reared her. Aunt Agony calls Ranny good-for-nothing and says he'll never be true to any woman for very long. She urges Sylvia to mary PETER WILK, the brother of her friend, MISS SARA WILK.

Aunt Agony's opinion of Ranny seems to be correct, too. For he suddenly drops Fay and marries Sylvia after all. The pair settle down in a tiny Beacon street flat that Sylvia calls The Nest, and before long Ranny is back with his poker-playing cronies gambling away most of the family funds. Then he has a second love affair with Fay But when Sylvia tells him she's going to have a baby he turns over a new leaf. And Fay quickly announces her engagement to an old beau, EDDIE CARTER, State street wholesale merchant, and marries him.

Shortly after the birth of JUNIOR, Sylvia's baby, Ranny returns to his old crowd and his old ways. Sylvia has to give music lessons to pay her doctor bill and keep the little household going.

Ranny buys a new car and spends a great deal of time in it, with MRS. JANE BRACKETT, who sells real estate for his father's company. MOTHER PHELPS tells Sylvia how disgusted FATHER PHELPS is with Ranny. And at last he takes THOMAS BOYLE, who is married to Ranny's young sister, LOLLY, into the firm.

Sylvia decides to have a career of her own, so long as Ranny seems to admire the Jane Brackett type of woman. She takes singing lessons from her old teacher, MISS SHARP, who tells her she has a really remarkable voice. And she sends a song she has written, "When Everything's Said," to a music publisher, hoping he will buy it and bring it out. Then Mother Phelps asks her to sing at a musicale-tea one afternoon in her Louisburg square home and Sylvia says she will. It is the first time she has ever sung in public

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER XXXIV

Copyright, 1926, Johnson Features, Inc

NO prima donna on her first night [illegible] cheered from stage [illegible] [illegible] her way [illegible] crowded [illegible] room with [illegible] that turned to watch [illegible] heavenly voice," [illegible] exclaim [illegible] she was before Ranny mar[illegible] look and she felt as [illegible] bubbling inside, too. She [illegible] as if she never would reach the [illegible] where Peter stood [illegible] her. Not knowing [illegible] she put out her hands as she came up to him and [illegible] bracing herself.

"Oh, Peter, was I all right? How did my voice sound from here?" she asked him breathlessly.

His eyes [illegible] her that it had sounded marvelous to him, at least. They were full of praise for her, his grave brown eyes.

"At least couldn't have sung better [illegible] and Sylvia knew that he [illegible] what he said.

[illegible] for Ranny. But he was nowhere in sight. He and Mrs. [illegible] had left their place [illegible] stairs. Where could they be? Probably across the hall in the dining room, having some tea and sandwiches.

"I wonder if Ranny asked his mother to invite her here today," Sylvia thought idly.

Then she noticed that a slim woman in gray, who sat with a group in the bay window, was speaking to her, saying something that Sylvia couldn't hear above the chatter and the clatter of tea cups. The woman got up and came toward her.

"Your voice is perfectly lovely," she said in a sugary voice. "Do let me have your telephone number before you go. I may want to have you sing for me some time. I'm Mrs. Churchill, you know."

She said it as if she were saying "I'm Queen Victoria," and went back to her chair.

Sylvia turned to Peter with laughter lighting the blue depths of her lovely eyes. "Isn't that a rare joke? She thinks I'm a professional singer that Mother Phelps hired for the afternoon," she lilted.

Peter glared at the back of the woman in gray.

"The idiot," he muttered. But Sylvia stopped him with a smile.

"No, it tickled me to death to have her think it," she told him. "Doesn't it prove that my voice isn't so bad after all?"

Before they could settle the question Sylvia heard Lolly's gay [illegible] in her ear and her hand, holding a cigarette daintily between two fingers, came down on Sylvia's shoulder.

"Come here a minute, darling. I want you," she said. "You'll excuse her for a second, won't you, Peter?" And she guided Sylvia through the close-packed room and up the broad carpeted stairs to her own room.

"I just wanted to get you away from Peter Wilk," she explained, flicking the ash from her cigarette with a fingernail that was like a pink jewel. "People say such catty things, and it did look queer for you to rush across the room to Peter right after your song, as if he were your husband!"

Sylvia flushed. "But Ranny wasn't in sight—"

"I know he wasn't! I know he was out in the sunroom with Mrs. Brackett." Lolly took the words out of her mouth. "But that's all the more reason why you should have hunted him up instead of going to Peter."

She stopped and turned toward the door. There was a sound of tapping on its ivory white panels. "Who's there?" she asked, and Ranny stepped into the room. His face was like a thunder cloud.

"Hello, [illegible]. What's on your mind?" Lolly asked, [illegible] making room for him to sit down beside her on the bench before the dresser.

But he stood looking at Sylvia [illegible] "Did Mother [illegible] you to sing today, or was it your own brilliant idea?" he asked her.

She looked back at him with surprise written all over her flushed face and her nervous fingers began to fidget with the soft lace that [illegible] her dress.

[illegible] Lolly [illegible] her eyes wide. [illegible] because you have a wife with a voice like Sylvia's.

Ranny turned on her with a [illegible] of annoyance. "Will you please get out of here and let me talk to Sylvia without butting in?" he asked. Like most brothers and sisters, he and Lolly always spoke their minds to each other with extreme [illegible].

"No, I won't go!" Lolly retorted, her chin and her nose in the air. "This is my room and I'll stay as long as I want to."

Just then the door opened and in came Mother Phelps.

Lolly's Scorn

"Well, this is a family gathering," she said. "Lolly, my dear, you'd better run right downstairs. Sylvia, they want you to sing again. Why did you run away like that?" She stopped and, realizing that something was wrong, looked from one to the other of the three faces, questioningly.

"I—I don't believe Ranny wants me to sing," Sylvia faltered at last. "He seems to think I made a fool of myself by singing that one time."

Ranny flushed and shifted from one foot to the other.

"No, I don't think you made a fool of yourself," he admitted grudgingly. "Your voice is all right in its way, but I don't want my wife to sing in public. I have no use for these women who read or sing at teas. A woman's place is in the home, not gadding around showing off. Sylvia has enough to do taking care of the baby and keeping her house clean."

Lolly Boyle made a noise that was halfway between a snort and a laugh—a scornful sound. "Huh! You don't care if she gives music lessons, though, do you?" she asked, her eyes snapping. "You don't care if she works half the day doing that, do you? But you hate to see her step out and do something that gives her a little pleasure. You're jealous—that's what you are. I heard what your friend Mrs. Brackett said just now about Sylvia's voice down stairs. [illegible] ought to be ashamed of yourself to let a woman say such things about your wife. You [illegible]!"

"LOLLY," Mother Phelps [illegible] [illegible] her [illegible] between your teeth. And go downstairs and see that [illegible] some more tea.

Sylvia Silent

Without another word Lolly went, swinging her hips saucily as she went.

Mother Phelps stood in deep thought for a minute or two after she had gone. Then she spoke very quietly to Ranny. "You go downstairs, too, Randall," she said. "I want to talk to Sylvia for a moment."

She followed him to the door and locked it after him. Then she came back to Sylvia and cupped her chin in her hand, turning her face up so that she could look straight at her.

"Is it true that you are giving music lessons?" she asked.

Sylvia closed her eyes over the tears that were gathering in them and nodded.

"How long has this been going on?" Mother Phelps asked then.

"Nearly a year," Sylvia whispered. Her throat ached with her wish to cry. "About ten months, I think."

"How did you happen to start it?" the pleasant voice asked again.

Trouble Looms

Sylvia didn't answer. Her love for Ranny rose up in her and kept her silent. Not for anything [illegible] to Mother Phelps that Ranny [illegible] [illegible] together that [illegible] even a [illegible].

But Mother Phelps was [illegible].

"I see," she said quietly, after two or three [illegible] pass. "I think I see."

"My dear," she began, "I [illegible] here for [illegible] quite [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] money. That's Ranny's part of the marriage [illegible] to that part. Do you see what I mean?"

"Your voice is a gift," she said when she spoke [illegible] you ought to use to give pleasure to others. Don't pay any attention to what Ranny says about [illegible] in public. He [illegible] and do things that [illegible] their ways [illegible]. They want to keep [illegible] to themselves. Now [illegible] your eyes and [illegible] and talk [illegible] we have more [illegible]."

Sylvia went downstairs.

And she sang again. She sang the song she had written for Ranny.

It was while she was singing the words "When everything's said and everything's done, there's one that I love, and you're the one," that she heard him starting his car in front of the house.

Angry, he had gone and left her.

It was a week later that Sarah Wilk offered Sylvia her house for the Summer.

She and Aunt Agony came to spend the day, which happened to be [illegible] hot for May.

"You'll never be able to keep the baby in this stuffy place all Summer long," Aunt Agony said to Sylvia in the living room after lunch. "This is his second Summer and he'll die in this hot hole."

It was then that Sarah spoke up.

"Peter and I are going down to the farm next week," she said. "[illegible] more than welcome to our house. We'd rather let you live in it than shut it up all Summer."

Sylvia was silent.

"I insist that you take it," Sarah went on. "And Agony [illegible] up in it, won't you, Agony?"

"I certainly will," sniffed Aunt Agony. "I'd do anything to get the child out of this hot box."

Sylvia thought longingly of Sarah Wilk's big cool house [illegible] and its shady yard. What a heavenly place for the baby [illegible].

But she knew that Ranny [illegible] would live in Peter Wilk's house—never! If there was one person in the world for whom he [illegible] [illegible] that person was Peter Wilk.

[illegible] She knew there was [illegible] to argue with Aunt Agony and Sarah Wilk together [illegible] have [illegible] together were unbeatable.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

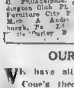
OUR FRIEND THE SUBCONSCIOUS

WE have all heard of Emile Coue's theories of the subconscious and how we can defend ourselves against illness, pain and discouragement by inoculating our subconscious mind with the vaccine of resistance. The subconscious, then, becomes an unseen friend which upholds us at [illegible] ment of need.

[illegible] lieve in this with all my [illegible] use it for myself, and [illegible] [illegible] ple, King [illegible] have diffi[illegible]



The danger [illegible] cal situation I begin talking of the different sides of the question long before [illegible] possi[illegible] [illegible] to be done in an offhand way, not combatively, yet insistently, stressing especially the point at which the danger lies, and the arguments that will be used to make him do the wrong thing.

Again and again I come back to all this, at times especially when he is off his guard and not particularly following up my arguments, the moments when, according to Coue, the "inoculation" was most effect.

When the onslaught takes place, the King's subconscious mind is brimfull of my arguments, which (carefully instilled in the off guard moments) rise up as his own thoughts, to protect him.

A dangerous game, you say? I might be giving the wrong advice? Might, yes, but I don't, that's just it, although you may laugh at my egotism! I'm jolly careful to use the right vaccine.

Be sure that I do not play with fire. I, too, have become wise in my day! The things that come to me now in life are too important to permit of carelessly handling them.

During the war, for long months at a time, I moved about from one infectious hospital to another. In every darkest hole of fetid misery I went, protected only by the absolute certainty of mind that I was immune from illness. So long as I am useful to my people, I told myself, nothing can happen to me.

I remember once, during the worst scourge of black typhus, they implored me to wear rubber gloves because the sick kissed my hands. I replied indignantly: "Shall I allow these poor, brave fellows to kiss rubber? My skin is much nicer!" And there were no wretched rubber gloves.

Sometimes five or six hundred typhus-sick kissed my hands in a day. I came through it all with perfect safety.

So much for subconscious inoculation!

SCIENTIFIC theory asserts that [illegible] from an ancestry [illegible] assumed an [illegible] position.

Similarly, all the human organs are designed to support an active [illegible] life.

The average civilized man and woman do not get this activity and [illegible] organs [illegible] run at one [illegible] premature old age [illegible] poisoning.

A man who wants to be fit [illegible] return to the normal [illegible]. He should decide [illegible] what kind of exercise he likes [illegible] and make up his mind to get [illegible].

The daily [illegible] exercise should [illegible] interesting and attractive. It is well worth while to consult an [illegible] and discover what best suits [illegible].

A daily walk is an excellent form of exercise. It should follow interest [illegible] and have a definite object.

The best equipment for a walk is [illegible] a stick and [illegible].

Walking increases the chest expansion and improves the posture.

A good breathing exercise while walking is to fill the chest and then on the next two steps, to take in additional small breaths; on the third step to breathe out lightly. This [illegible] be done regularly for fifteen steps and repeated.

The workout is a period of active perspiring exercise. Few people ever perspire freely, and walking is an admirable stimulus to perspiration.

Gymnastics, running and handball are excellent forms of the workout.

The informal exercises of the game and athletic type, although more interesting and attractive, can never give the full practical corrective service of properly selected definite exercise. For this reason it is a good investment to spend a few minutes every morning before the open window contracting the arm, leg and abdominal muscles in movements specially designed to exercise them to the full.

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

TWENTIETH CENTURY women are getting wise. They're demanding stronger love and non-transferable engagement rings.

THEY don't believe in letting a man kill six or seven birds with one stone.

HIS heart may belong to the neighborhood, but the diamond belongs to her.

HE can switch his love, but they won't allow him to transfer the ring.

A GIRL doesn't mind becoming engaged to a divorced fellow, but she doesn't want any second-hand jewelry.

A MAN can be old, but the solitaire must be new.

IN the last year, a Chicago man has been engaged to twenty-seven girls and has only used one ring.

IT'S been on every finger around Lake Michigan.

IT'S like a bum restaurant; it changes hands over night.

THE diamond has done more traveling than a wart.

THE owner of the solitaire is a small man. He books his fingers three months in advance.

HE can look at his memorandum and tell you exactly whose hand the ring will be on a week from Tuesday.

SO far, the only dates he has open are Decoration Day and the 4th of July.

BUT he's working on those now.

HE'S been falling in love for seven years and has only worn out two diamonds.

ONE of them he lost for good by getting married.

HE said it served him right for being careless.

HE couldn't get it away from her. She took it out of the original mounting and had it set in a handcuff.

DAILY SHORT STORY

A TALE FOR WIVES

By Maria C. Luttrell

IN the case of a matrimonial triangle, public sympathy is invariably on the side of the wife. Like Caesar's better half, she can do no wrong. People have a habit of saying that the other woman has always snared the poor, defenseless husband intot evil doing. To a member of the so-called weaker sex is attributed the role of leader on any primrose path, the path that leads—down.

Jean Moore had been employed in Dr. Burton's office for two years before Mrs. Burton made things almost too unpleasant for her to stand. She had never been more than politely condescending to the girl. Then came the occasion when she had entered the private office while Jean and Dr. Burton were making out a deposit slip. Money and checks were spread out on the desk. As the doctor counted, first bills, then checks, Jean wrote down the amounts. He pushed a $20 bill toward the girl.

"That's yours!" he said.

Jean returned with a "Thank you, Doctor," and as far as they were concerned the matter was closed. The amount represented her salary for that week.

Mrs. Burton thought otherwise.

"I wish that I could pick up twenties as easily as that!" she startled them by saying right at their backs.

Dr. Burton rose quietly. "You can,' he remarked easily, holding out a handful of bills. "Help yourself!"

"I can't be bought off as gracefully as that!" She looked hard at Jean. Jean colored. Mrs. Burton's interpretation of the scene was so obvious.

Now, up to that time, Jim Burton had never thought of the girl as a girl. She had been merely an efficient force who did necessary things about the office, things for his convenience. She had been a good office girl. No more. No less.

Jean took the bills and checks, put them into the bankbook and snapped a rubber band around it. And murmuring, "I'm going out to lunch now, Doctor," left the office.

Irene Burton sat down in a chair by her husband's desk. "The brazen thing! To take money from you right before my eyes. You pay everything by check unless, of course, you want no record of the transaction. I've been wondering a long time why you have to stay at this office so long at night. Working cross word puzzles, you say! With someone to look up words in the dictionary for you, no doubt! I've wondered, too, why you bring roses from my garden to this office. To the girl! Funny how guileless a wife can be! I might have known that no man could be shut up in a room hour after hour with a girl without falling for her. Poor working girls indeed! Painted and powdered and lipsticked like the creatures they really are ——."

"See here, Irene. That will do. I might listen to this kind of talk at home but I don't have to hear it here. The office is mine."

"Are you by any chance ordering me out?" Her face was flaming.

"No, I am simply trying to put on the soft pedal until I can teach you that a busy man like I am, a scientist, has something to think about beside sex. Modern novels have ruined the sane viewpoint of all idle women."

"Idle! You call me idle? When I do everything possible for you! Where can you find a cleaner, better kept house than mine? Better meals, ready at any hour of the day or night." She sat up, smug as any Pharisee. "Why shouldn't we think sex when our husbands are at the mercy of these creatures with whom they spend more time than they can manage to spare for their wives. I saw you look at her, Jim Burton, when you handed her that clean, new twenty dollar bill.

"Of course I looked at Jean. Why shouldn't I?"

"Jean, is it? Such familiarity! You ordered me out of the office because of that girl, did you? Well, I'll have you know that as long as you come to my house I'll come here."

With that she rose and swept majestically out.

Jim Burton leaned his weary head on his hands. He had dozens of women like that in his practice. He talked with them, soothed them, tried to untangle their twisted mentality, their distorted sense of sex. Irene had always nagged at him, about this woman and that, just enough to rub him raw. He had given her everything he could: diamonds, furs, a lovely car, servants, a magnificent home. She had never wanted children. She was selfish, a parasite.

There had never been a woman in his life since he had known Irene. He could guide other men's wives when their agile brains went off on tangents about sex. But somehow, he felt no urge to try to save himself. If Irene wanted to raise scenes, suspect him, she could. He would lose himself in his work. A case won was like a jewel in a diadem of glory. He was a born doctor. Gentle, sympathetic, understanding, self-sacrificing. He never saw the amount of a fee in a case. He saw victory or failure over his worst enemy, disease.

Presently Jean came back into the office. She was a colorless sort of girl. She had a quiet voice, eager, skillful hands. A good memory, he never had to tell her anything more than once. She was quick to serve him, always. Many a day she had worked uncomplainingly through lunch time. She probably did use a little rouge and a lip stick, as Irene had said. He had never noticed.

She sat down in the chair that his wife had just vacated. "Did you tell Mrs. Burton that you were just paying me my salary, Doctor?"

"No." He never elaborated on anything when he spoke with her. Never offered explanations. She had been merely an automaton, doing his bidding.

He looked at her. She had beautiful blue eyes, expressive, like flame burning back of aquamarines. He had never noticed them before. She was trying to smile but her soft red lips were trembling. He had never before noticed her mouth. It was lovely, like a cupid's bow. And she was young, young as Irene had been when he had married her.

"Will it help you any if—if I stay on?" She was making a brave effort not to break down before him. He recalled suddenly that he had overheard her say one day to a girl in an adjoining office, "Girls in offices can't afford to have feelings if they want to get on."

Jim Burton was surprised at his quick, vehement answer. "It will help—more than anything in the world, Jean." He leaned over and patted her hand, gently.

He was conscious of the blood racing in his veins; of the old, almost forgotten urge of man to possess something desirable.

Her hand under his trembled. His own shook a little and he withdrew it, reddening slowly.

She had never seemed a woman to him.

He was not all scientist, as he had often boasted. He was potter's clay, soft, pliable, pushed back into the cauldron of life's hot fire, once more to be burned, beaten and hammered into a mould. And the hand that pushed him back had been that of the one person he had trusted most in all the world—his wife—with whom he had hoped to walk in peace until the end.

Strange that his wife had never pondered over the fact that in old age only women walk alone. There appears to be a preponderance of the female of the species so that there is always some woman ready to take a man although he may be blind, toothless, enfeebled or infirm from old age.

CORRESPONDENCE OF A LADY DIPLOMAT

A Handy Reference Manual for Those Seeking Love's Greatest Gift

It is now known that Lady Teazle never forgave leaders in the film industry for the humiliation she suffered during her earlier daze. In fact, she brooded in later years and was inclined to speak slightingly of certain so-called benefactors who recognized her beauty, for a time, and then became indifferent, often leaving her in a quandary concerning shelter and raimeat. In support of this, witness the letter written to Abie Carroll in the Fall of 1928:

Dishonest Abe—

Wot an egg you've turned out to be! They came for the sable coat yesterday and said you had instructed them to turn it over to Mrs. Carroll. You may think I am clay in your hands, Old Bean, but you're not going to toss this blonde baby into the Lost and Found column. Thus this Prairie Flower, transplanted among the oil cans of Flatbush, brooded over her secret sorrow, while the restless tides pounded relentlessly against the rock-bound shores of her frail reason.

FOXY GRANDPA'S DAILY BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

WE were riding in the subway and a very pretty young lady got on when the train stopped at a station. She was wearing a beautiful gray fur coat and I could not help but think how becoming it was to her.

When she wasn't looking at us, Bobby nudged me and said:

"Isn't that pretty fur, Foxy Grandpa? What kind of an animal does it come from?"

"From dozens of little moles," I answered, and just then from out of my pocket came Bunny's hushed voice, whispering:

"I'm glad we're not so fashionable."

We got off of the subway and as we walked along Bobby said:

"Do you know, Foxy Grandpa, those fur coats are awfully pretty on ladies, but they always make me feel sad when I think of all the little animals that might still be running around in the country having a good time."

"Nothing depresses me quite so much," sighed Bunny, "as a fur coat. And you know, although we are not particularly expensive or rare, they dye us and call us by all kinds of fancy names."

"Moles are such useful little fellows, too," I said.

"Why are they so useful?" asked Bobby.

"They perform four services for man which are very valuable," I replied.

"Please tell me what they are, Foxy Grandpa," asked my little human interrogation point.

"I'll tell you," I said. "If it weren't for those little moles we might not have any bread to eat and animals might not have any grass and we might never have any roast beef as a result."

"Why?" asked Bobby.

"Because moles get rid of thousands of secret, unseen enemies—grubs and insects which live under the earth and destroy the roots of corn and grain and grass.

"And then, they are regular little ditch diggers. They run their tunnels in a regular labyrinth underneath the surface of the earth and form a perfect system of drains so that after a heavy rain the water can be carried down below the surface and not stay in pools and rot the plants.

"Then again, you know, that the roots of plants require air and these little fellows by their constant burrowing make cracks in the earth so that air can get down to the roots of plants and make them strong."

"That's three," said Bobby, "now what is the fourth, Foxy Grandpa?"

"You've heard farmers talk a lot about top-dressing and you've seen how they will carry dirt from one place to another to help their plants. That is just what little moles do. In their search for prey—and they have terrific appetites—moles bring up to the surface fresh and finely powdered earth which serves as a perfect top-dressing."

"Who'd ever think of that?" said Bobby.

"Very few people," sighed Bunny.

SMART SAYINGS OF CLEVER CHILDREN

The Boston Evening American will pay $1 for published smart sayings. Address "Smart Sayings," Boston Evening American.

My next door neighbor has a little boy five years old. The other day she pinned a medal on him and told him he couldn't swear when he had it on. He thought it was quite a novelty and went out to play. Five minutes later he came running in saying: "Mama take off the medal quick, I want to swear."

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

LOOK up, if you will, at the man who goes by in a car that is fit for a king, and follow the look with an envious sigh, if you feel you've no reason to sing. Or look down, if you will, at the beggar who stands at the gutter and hopes for a crust; look down at the outstretched and pitiful hands of the man who asks alms in the dust. You can always find cause to be sad, to be glad, as you choose to look up or down, and your fortune will either be good or be bad as you view it with smile or with frown. Since it rests then, with you to be pauper or prince, why not grasp all that's offered of bliss! Why not treasure your share of the gladness life mints, and instead of its curse take its kiss?

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS---

By Helen Rowland

GO to, my Daughter. Let NO man persuade thee that courtship is but a rehearsal for matrimony!

For, verily, since the first kiss in the Garden of Eden, every lover hath said, "Others may change—but OURS shall be an eternal honeymoon!"

And the sleeves of the cynics have been filled with laughter.

For, alas, between being a fiancee and being a wife, there are ninety and nine differences!

Yea, even the difference between a lingering cigarette-kiss and a hasty coffee-kiss.

And the difference between ordering from the a-la-cart side of the menu—and ordering from the table d'hote side.

The difference between sending a man home at twelve P. M.—and PRYING him out of the home at eight A. M.

Between watching him tip the waiter a dollar—and lending him a quarter to make up the change.

Between being told that thou art dazzlingly beautiful—and being told that thy shoulder strap is slipping or thy back hem is ripping.

Between knowing that a man is filled with impatience to SEE thee—and knowing that he is champing with impatience because he must WAIT for thee.

Between holding hands and watching the moon—and holding thy breath and watching the taxicab meter.

Between putting up thy face to see "how nice and smooth" a man's cheek is—and putting up thy hand to see "if it is rough enough to require a shave."

Between being tenderly helped across a busy street—and being anxiously PUSHED across it.

Between putting flowers in a man's coat-lapel—and putting patches in his pockets.

Between listening for his ring at eight P. M.—and hearkening for his latchkey at twelve G. M.

Go to. Unto a man, there may seem no difference between the glamour of romance and the sweet complacency of marriage.

But, oh the difference to THEE!

BOSTON RADIO AMERICAN

VOICING THE GREAT DEMOCRACY OF THE AIR

HEARINGS ON RADIO BILL MONDAY

With hearings before the joint Senate and House Patent Committees scheduled for Monday, April 5th, officials of the National Association of Broadcasters are calling the listener's attention to the importance of the Dill-Vestal Copyright Bill, which is said to offer the solution of the copyright music problem of the broadcasters of America.

Paul B. Klugh, executive chairman of the Broadcaster's Association, in an address over WEAF just a week before the hearings, pointed out some of the inequalities of the present situation and explained the position of the broadcasters as regards the new bill.

IN FAVOR OF PAYING.

Broadcasters are in favor of paying for the use of copyrighted music," he explained, "but see no reason why this payment should be made exclusively to the publishers and writers who belong to a single organization. We realize there is much genius in the United States which needs encouragement, and therefore are desirous of paying every copyright owner, whether a member of the Association or not."

An appeal to listeners to write the members of the House and Senate Committee was included in the talk. The Dill-Vestal Bill is designed, according to Mr. Klugh, to provide for equitable payment to the owner of musical copyrights, stations of similar power and location paying the same rate. No rate has been suggested, however, by the Broadcasters Association, their appeal being that the rate of payment should be based on the number of broadcasters; thus, if a number is popular and is broadcast several times a night the owner of the copyright will receive payment for each transmission.

SIMILAR METHOD.

The Phonograph record and player piano roll manufacturers have used a similar method for 17 years, according to Mr. Klugh, and the extention of the record plan to broadcasting seems the most logical plan in his opinion. Listeners are being invited to write members of the Senate Patent Committee and the House Patent Committee expressing their views. The Senators may be addressed in care of the Senate Office Building, and the Congressmen in care of the House Office building.

William P. Butler, from Massachusetts, is chairman of the Senate Committee. Other members include Jesse H. Metcalf, of Rhode Island, Richard P. Ernst, of Kentucky, C. C. Dill, author of the bill, of Washington and others. Albert H. Vestal, of Indiana is chairman of the House Patent Committee, other members being Henry L. Bowles, of Massachusetts, Randolph Perkins of New Jersey, Clarence J. McLeon, of Michigan, Sol Bloom, of New York and others.

What They Say

At Sea.
March 15th.

Radio Editor.
Boston Evening American.
Dear Sir:—

I am the radio operator on a British freighter, and we make several trips across the Atlantic during the course of a year. Of course our main diversion while at sea, is the radio. I have rigged a loud talker on the deck and in the crews cabin. Everyone can hear the concerts.

It might interest you to know of the reception we get at sea. We hear your Boston stations as far as the half-way point. The best reception comes from WBZ, whom I have heard in the Bay of Biscay. WNAC seems to come in better during the daytime than at night. WEEI is always good, and we particularly enjoy his New York programs. Goldy and Dusty are the favorites, along with the WEAF Grand Opera Company.

Am writing this so that you might tell your readers what the radio means to us. I have always been a constant reader of your paper, and especially like the Frank Crane articles.

Yours very truly,
Arthur G. Crandon.

NOTE:—The "What They Say" Column is open to readers. Keep all letters under 200 words in length. Only those of general interest and containing constructive criticism, will be used.

HOW BOSTON BROKERS VIEW STOCK MARKET

How Boston brokers view the stock market is shown in comment herewith:

Paul Johnson & Co.—For the past two weeks the market has been dominated by professionals, and price changes have been far from reflecting the attitude of the general investing public. We doubt if any definite trend will develop in the near future. Securities which have been pushed to extreme heights will doubtless react while sound investment issues should advance to their proper levels.

Tucker, Anthony & Co.—If enough power exists to absorb outsiders' offerings in the next day or two it will look as though a very considerable rally or series of rallies is in order, the lacklog of which should be continued ease in credit and a seasonal pick up in business with the advent of Spring weather.

INSULL INTERESTS TO ERECT LARGEST PLANT

Insull utility interests will erect largest steam electric generating station in world through a new company being formed for that purpose. Entire project will cost $100,000,000, and first unit—one-quarter of plant—will be completed by 1929. Public financing will be announced shortly. New company, with Samuel Insull as president, will sell power only to Insull companies and perhaps railroads in Chicago district which are carrying out large electrification programs.

NEW CORPORATE ISSUES IN MARCH DECREASED

New corporate issues floated in March totaled $301,136,500, a decrease of more than $23,000,000 from March, 1925, according to Journal of Commerce. Total for February, 1926, was $351,662,000 and for January $546,870,100.

'DON'T ELOPE AT 15,' ADVICE OF DIVORCEE

"Don't elope, girls, when you're only 15 years old," is the bitter advice given young women by Mrs. Marion K. Mekkelson, Boston waitress, from whom her husband, Martin Mekkelson, secured a divorce on the strength of her confession and promise of atonement.

"I ran away to Bellows Falls with that man (Mekkelson) when I was but 15 years old," said the bobbed, blonde young woman in her home at No. 6 Dynamo street, Somerville. "Any romance begun at such an age is the bunk."

The girl denied that she had signed the confession and the promise of atonement, but she admitted that she had told her husband several of the things incorporated in the document.

Though the document had Mrs. Mekkelson admitting intoxication, she said that she never took a drink of intoxicating liquor in her life.

She is now living at the home of her mother, Mrs. Johanna Billings, and working as a waitress, though she admits having ambitions to try her fortune in the movies.
